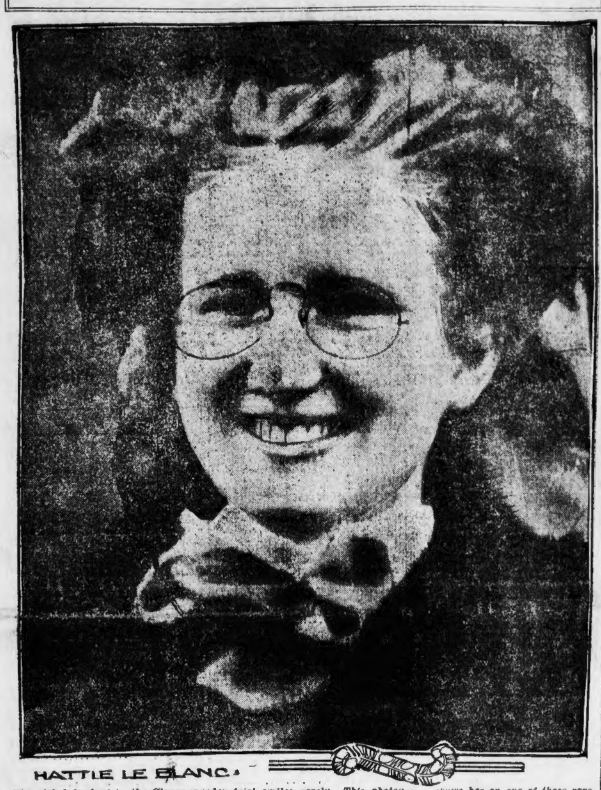
HATTIE LE BLANC'S SMILING FACE



HATTIE LE BLANC.

The girl defendant in the Glover murder trial smiles rarely. This photograph shows her on one of those rare occasions.

TRAGEDY WIDOW REVEALS PAST IN LE BLANC TRIAL

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover admitted under the aggressive cross-examination of Lawyer Melvin M. Johnson to-day, in the trial of Hattie Le Blanc for the alleged murder of Clarence F. Glover, that she was familiar with firearms; that her husband always kept a great many in the house; that she and he shot at targets in the back yard; that she had used a rifle, shotgun and revolver, and that she may have used all of the revolvers which her husband owned at one time or another.

It was a grilling ordeal through which the attractive widow of the murdered man was put by the young lawyer who is fighting for the freedom of the accused girl. At times the witness' eyes flashed with anger.

Mrs. Glover told about bringing Hattie Le Blanc to Boston and taking her to various theatres. She denied that she ever took the girl to St. Botolph street. She denied that she had told a friend that she wanted to give Hattie Le Blanc up the next day ater the murder but that a certain person would not let her.

When Mr. Johnson asked Mrs. Glover what had become of certain letters that had been written to Hattie Mrs. Glover exclaimed:

"Atfer my husband's death about everybody seemed to want to get aobut everything I possessed and in one way and another about all my possessions have gone."

SAYS GIRL NEVER USED A PISTOL.

Mrs. Glover said that she never knew Hattie Le Blanc to use a revolver and that she never knew Hattie and her husband to quarrel. She said that she and her husband had little spats over dogs once in a while.

By compelling Mrs. Glover to hold up a mirror of her past life, gaze at it and tell what she saw to the jury and spectators who filled the courtrom, the young attorney caused the woman's eyes to flash with anger. Again she was nervous, and there were signs that she might weaken as a result of the ordeal.

Mrs. Glover admitted that she had received leters under a false name—Minnie Everett Clark—while living with her husband in Waltham. She said that she met Clarence Glover, whom she first knew as Clarence Gardner, through a chum variously named Elizabeth, Lizzie and Lina, and through Glover's brother, Arthur. She and Glover were married twice, once in 1890 and again in 1900.

Untruth in Marriage Statement.

The first marriage was not a legal one, Mrs. Glover said. She admitted that she had not told the truth in connection with that marriage when she said she was born in East Boston, and that her mother was born in France.

Mrs. Glover worked in a mill when a girl, made dresses later, bought and sold pawn tickets, ran a hair-dressing place, canvassed over much of the country for books with a blind woman, addressed envelopes, sold tinware, did millinery, and at one time was a marble statue on the stage.

"Were there any other things that you did on the stage?" asked Mr. Johnson.

"Not anything that I can remember," replied Mrs. Glover. "If I had had an education maybe I could have done better."

"Did you and your husband do a good deal of target practice at the Park Lane House in Waltham?"

"Yes."

"Did you do any target practice with a revolver there?"

"Yes."

Just before the direct examination of the witness was concluded to-day Assistant District Attorney Wier hinted at the motive that the State will allege that Hattie Le Blanc had for killing Glover. He had brought out from Mrs. Glover that she, her husband and Hattie had been to the Waltham football game on November 20 a last year, the day of the tragedy, and that Mr. Glover had paid some attention to Mrs. George A. Freeman. He gave Mrs. Freeman a box of candy.

"Did Hattie say anything about that?" asked Mr. Wier.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Glover, "Hattie told me to tell Mr. Glover not to make love to Mrs. Freeman."

Mrs. Glover declared on the witness stand that she never shot anything in her life. Once she shot at a woodpecker, she said, and missed it.

Many Women in Great Crowd.

The crowd began to gather at the court house at 6 o'clock. It increased steadily up to the time the doors were opened. Most of those who gatherd to catch a glimpse of Hattie Le Blanc as she was brought across the street from the jail and to get in the courtroom if possible and to hear the proceedings were women. Some of them were old and gray-haired, and some of them were young, well-dressed and of attractive appearance. The crowd was kept on the street by the court officers and not allowed to fill up the corridors of the building.

The jury went to breakfast at the Mansion House at 7 o'clock. After that they

INSTALL DIAZ FOR 8TH TIME

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—Troops that have been pouring into this city for twenty-four hours guarded the principal streets to-day during the inauguration of Porfirio Diaz, who for the eighth time assumed the presidency of the Mexican republic. To prevent any outbreak of violence President Diaz had issued orders that the ceremonies should be most simple. The disturbed condition of the republic caused the most extreme precaution to be taken and President Diaz, as well as his cabinet ministers, were closely guarded.

It became known to-day that President Diaz is seriously considering taking the field in person at the head of his soldiers if the revolutionary movement gains in strength.

The most trustworthy troops had been assigned to line the streets during the procession. The School of Mines building is less than half as big as the Chamber of Deputies building, but it was selected so that a great crowd could not be present. Only those having invitations were admitted and invitations were sent only to government officials and diplomats. Vice-President Corral was inaugurated at the same time.

Scores of secret police mingled with the crowd. It has been reported for a week than Madero, the rebel leader, had set to-day as the time for second uprising. The utmost efforts are being made to learn his plans.

Latest reports from northern Mexico indicate that the revolutionists have resorted to bombs. Serious loss of life is believed to have been averted by the discovery of an infernal machine beneath the Institute Colon, a Methodist school which was attacked during the anti-American riots at Guadalajara.

TURFMAN SUMMONED IN GRAFT PROBE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—James J. Evans, treasurer of the Metropolitan Turf Association, the most powerful of the racing organizations, was today served with a subpoena to appear before the legislative investigating committee, and the books of the association were virtually seized. Former Assistant District Attorney Isadore Kresel, who is associate counsel for the committee, spent the rest of the day examining the books of the association and will put Mr. Evans on the stand tomorrow.

BLIZZARD BLOCKS INDIANA TRAFFIC

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 1.—Traffic in Northern Indiana is practically paralyzed today as a result of a thirty-six hour fall of snow. The blizzard is still raging.

PENNSYLVANIA HAS 7,665,111 POPULATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The census bureau to-day announced the population of the State of Pennsylvania to be 7,665,111; West Virginia 1,221,119.

FOSS OFF TO FIGHT LODGE

Both expressing themselves as supremely confident of the result of the coming election of a United States senator, Governor-elect Foss and Senator Lodge left Boston today in opposite directions, Foss starting on his "non-partisan" tour of Cape Cod against Lodge, and the senior Senator for Washington to attend the short session of Congress.

Just before he left his office on Oliver street Mr. Foss, who was attired in the now famous battered soft hat and veteran overcoat, said to a reporter:

"From tidings that have already reached me regarding the sentiment among citizens of all shades of political belief on the Cape and the southeastern part of the State, I am confident the campaign I am embarking in will show such a strong public sentiment against his re-election that Senator Lodge will announce his withdrawal from the contest."

Foss Party in Two Autos.

The Foss party left in two limousine autos, the second one conveying the newspaper men.

Senator Lodge was informed to-day that the illness of his son, which had detained him in this city, was not serious, and he started for Washington. He said he would remain there throughout the short session of Congress and that he could see no political reason for his presence in this State until after Christmas. He voiced his confidence as to the result of the senatorial campaign as follows:

"I am leaving with every confidence in the result of the coming election in the Legislature. I could not but be touched by the expression of loyalty and support which have come to me from all parts of the State. I have no doubt as to the result."

Cook Goes With Foss.

With Mr. Foss were his staff of five insurgent Republicans, the latest addition being Sherwin L. Cook, a former councilman from Ward 21 and one of the managers of the campaign for re-election of the late Mayor Hibbard. Cook volunteered his services to Mr. Foss in the campaign against Lodge and they were promptly accepted.

Mr. Foss also was accompanied by Senator Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill, ex-Representative William B. Willett of Dorchester, Andrew J. Solis of Newton, former Mayor David T. Dickinson of Cambridge. At Provincetown the party will be met by a committee of the Board of Trade, which has arranged a reception in honor of the Governor-elect. The meeting to-night and that at Hyannis to-morrow night will be the only formal gatherings of the trip. The other meetings will be in the nature of "heart-to-heart talks with the people," Mr. Foss says. The schedule calls for more than a dozen such talks to-morrow and Saturday.

Mr. Foss will return to Boston Saturday afternoon, and leave for Washington Sunday night to be present at the opening of Congress. He says he will remain in Washington until the close of the short session, and will then resume his test of Senator Lodge's popularity, "if it appears to be necessary." Mr. Foss always makes that proviso, because he thinks the voice of Cape Cod will convince the senior Senator that his re-election is impossible.

SUICIDE BEFORE HIS RELATIVES

In the presence of his mother and wife, Frederick F. Phillips slashed his throat with a razor to-day, in his home at No. 433 Beech street, Roslindale, and died before Dr. A. J. Shadman of No. 1837 Centre street arrived. He had been ill for some time. This morning his wife went to a drug store to get some medicine for him, while his mother stayed with him. Phillips seized the bottle and drank all its contents at a gulp. Then he took out his razor and cut his throat.

INJUNCTION ASKED TO PREVENT STRIKE

In the Superior Court to-day Fred H. Thompson, a shoe manufacturer of Haverhill, asked that an injunction be issued against nine officers of the Shoe Workers' Union for the purpose of preventing a strike. Thompson also asks that these men be enjoined from interfering with the workmen now employed by him or from compelling him to organize a "closed" shop. Judge Pierce stated that he would hear the case Monday. J. J. Feeley, counsel for Thompson, stated that a strike might be called between now and Monday and that, therefore, his client would not be protected. Judge Pierce replied: "If between now and Monday a strike should be declared, I will issue a temporary injunction.

COMMITTEE OF "25" TO MEET MONDAY

The committee of twenty-five appointed at the mass meeting held last night in the Williams school hall in Chelsea, called for the purpose of considering a new charter for the city, will meet Monday night in the City Hall. Alexander Cook, chairman of the meeting held last night, has called the meeting and the committee will consider the suggestions and draft them into bills to be presented to the Legislature. The city is at present under a commission form of government.

SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 1.—The Louisiana breweries here have formed a million-dollar company to fight stores that oppose licensed saloons. Prices will be cut to force the stores out of business.

3 ROADS SLASH CHICAGO RATES

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—What promises to be a bitterly fought railroad fare battle is to be geun on New Year's day. Three Eastern trunk lines, the Grand Trunk, the Erie and the Wabash, will slash passenger rates from Chicago to New York and Boston. According to the notice served on thirteen Western railroad systems to-day by the insurgent lines, the first-class fare from Chicago to New York will be cut $8 and the second-class fare $6. The decision to make these reductions in the fares between Chicago and the Eastern points came at a secret meeting of the representatives of the three roads named in Chicago yesterday. Formal notice of the reduction was filed to-day.

THREE FAMILIES ROUTED BY FIRE

Three families were driven out by a fire at No. 12 Sharon street, South End shortly before noon to-day. The fire started in a closet on the second floor occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson and a two-year-old baby, and was probably caused by rats and matches. Mrs. Nickerson was not aware of the fire until Mrs. Fitzpatrick, an aged woman living on the third floor, who smelled the smoke in her rooms, ran down and notified her. The fire was put out with a damage of about $200.

FISH PRICES ARE HIGHER THAN EVER

The fish famine which has prevailed at T Wharf owing to bad weather on the fishing grounds since Monday reached a climax today when there were only 8,400 pounds for sale. Prices reached record heights. The official quotations were as follows: Cod, 10¼ cents a pound; haddock, 8¾; hake, 6¾. Dory fishermen who had a few cod got as high as 12 cents. There was no pollock in the market. There has been no cusk since Monday.

AERO MEET IN SOUTH.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 1.—A four-day aviation tournament opened here to-day. The scheduled feature of to-day's program was an aeroplane race between Post and Ely to the Gulf of Mexico and back.

REPORT $20,000 SAFE ROBBERY

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A report reached here to-day from Orange, N. J., that the safe in the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western station there had been blown open and $20,000 stolen.

WILLIAM THAW, 3D, CLAIMS HIS BRIDE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—William Thaw, 3d, of Pittsburg, was married to Miss Gladys Vergenie Bradley of Bridgeport, Conn., late this afternoon. Mr. Thaw was known principally during his life by achievements which gave him some notoriety. Upon one occasion he drank sixty glasses of brandy and soda at the Pittsburg Country Club on a wager and won it, but spent a week in the hospital as a result.

NOTED SOCIALIST AT TREMONT TEMPLE

Dr. Albert Suedekum, eminent sociologist and member of the German Reichstag as a representative of the Social Democrats, will speak at Tremont Temple this evening under the auspices of the Socialist party of Boston. Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of Hon. Philip Snowden, Socialist member of the British Parliament, will also make an address. Dr. Suedekum is making a tour of the United States at present to study social conditions.

ODD SCAR CLEW IN MURDER CASE

A scar resulting from an unusual operation for appendicitis may lead to the probable identification of Hyman Wiener, who up to eight weeks ago lived with his parents at No. 133 Mindon street, Roxbury, as the man who shot and killed policeman George W. Barnett in Philadelphia last Monday night and was himself slain by the dying officer.

Polise Inspector O'Connor of Philadelphia has shown Wiener's parents a photograph of the man killed by the policeman's bullet and his description. The Wieners said the photograph did not resemble that of their son, but that the description closely tallied with his. They said their son had a mark on the side of his face similar to that shown in the description of the dead man and that he had a scar on the left side of his body where he had been operated on for appendicitis, the first case of the kind, they had been told by the surgeons, that had come under their observation. The man killed in Philadelphia had such a mark.

The dead man and a companion were acting suspiciously when Barnett accosted them. He was about to place the man supposed to be Wiener under arrest when the latter opened fire, shooting the policeman through the stomach and in the hip. Barnett, as he fell, grappled with his assailant but after a struggle the prisoner broke away. The bluecoat, with the last remnant of his strength, drew his revolver and fired at the fleeing man. The bullet pierced the suspect's heart.

HITS ALDERMEN WITH HOLY WRIT

Bombarded with texts from the Bible, the Somerville aldermen who have attacked Mayor Woods of that city at recent meetings of the board, are to-day diligently studying the Good Book to see if they cannot discover a few scriptural shots to fire in return.

Mayor Woods told members of the federation of the Union square churches last night of the personal attacks made on him by the aldermen, and said:

"I have been asked if I intend to make any reply to what was said at the meeting of the aldermen last week. The dignity of the office forbids me to reply, but if I could go back thirty years when I had the red blood, I might make reply. If any of you will read the thirty-sixth chapter of Proverbs, fourth verse, when you get home you will find the reply I would make now."

The verse alluded to reads as follows:

"Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him."

Previously, the toastmaster, William M. Armstrong, referring to the Mayor's fight with the aldermen, quoted this text from Job:

"Doth the wild ass bray when there is grass, or doth the ox low when there is fodder?"

"If I had the audacity to quote the same text," said the Mayor, "to the board of aldermen, in all probability I would be in the hospital."

YES, EDISON MAY FLY, TOO

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 1.—Thomas A. Edison mentioned to-day that he had invented a heavier-than-air flying machine, but begged his interviewer not to mention the subject. Aviation and immortality of the soul are two bugbears to the wizard to-day, and even one of the flying machines could not get him higher up in the air than merely broaching either subject. He says:

"Every morning I get a stack of letters a foot high from aeroplane cranks who are worrying their heads off because I have neglected to manifest an interest in aviation. They offer suggestions and want my help in working out their problems. I admit that I have a little patent along aeroplane lines, but please don't publish anything about it, for really I have too much to do to become interested in the navigation of the air. It is a simple little thing that I sent along to Washington with some other patents a long time ago."

Briefly described, the invention consists of a basket hung on a vertical shaft, on the upper end of which revolve box kites or other form of aeroplanes, at sufficient speed to lift the whole affair. Its chief merit is that the centre of gravity being low, keeps the machine in automatic balance.

ELEONORA SEARS TO LEARN TO FLY

Although members of her family are strongly opposed to her becoming an aviator, on account of the danger involved, Miss Elenora Sears has become so fascinated with the sport that she will learn to fly and with her keen enthusiasm in the newest of sports full aroused, her friends are certain she will soon be landing blue ribbons in amateur aviation contests.

Miss Sears has already made two aerial flights, the last one with Grahame-White, the English aviator. This so thoroughly aroused her keen interest in the sport that she is having a small bi-plane built in which she will navigate the air herself, after she has taken a course of lessons in the management of the heavier than air machine from White.

Although he said just prior to his departure for England that he did not approve of aviation for women, because of the difficulties of handling the planes, White tacitly admitted that Miss Sears is to take lessons from him and that he is having a little bi-plane built for her. He did say Miss Sears would undoubtedly make an excellent pupil.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight London Time

Yankee Jackies Save 25 Men From Tempest.

CHERBOURG.—French hearts have been won by the heroic work of American sailors in the terrific storm which has been raging off the French coast for thirty-six hours. The gale was still blowing to-day, though slightly decreased in fury and was accompanied by torrential rains. By the rapid work of the crew of the Louisiana, one of the visiting American ships of the second division, twenty-five men were saved from the steam cutter of the French cruiser Dupleix. After a hard battle the Louisiana's men succeeded in getting the French sailors on board, and the majority of them are hobnobbing with the Americans to-day, only a few having been able to return to their vessel.

Widow Finds $1,000,000.

PARIS.—Mrs. J. Arthur Hinckley, the young widow of the wealthy American yachtsman who died at Bellport, L. I., on August 31, has found a million dollars. This tidy little sum had been overlooked by Mrs. Hinckley in arranging her late husband's affairs, and it was only through an accidental visit to the bank of Morgan & Harjes the other day that she discovered how rich she really was. At the same time she learned that she is to have the handsome steam yacht Iolanthe, which was the pride of her late husband. Mrs. Hinckley is a daughter of Mrs. Sylvester Woodbridge Beach, formerly of Chicago, but now of Paris. She has lived nearly all her life in Europe with her mother. She happened to go to the bank the other day and was amazed when one of the firm mentioned offhand the overlooked million dollars. Now it is said that Mrs. Hinckley intends to take up yachting and will keep the Iolanthe on the move.

Briton Fights Fraud Charge.

BRADFORD, England.—It is understood that Mr. Briggs of the firm of J. F. Briggs & Co. of Bradford will sail immediately for New York in connection with the arrest of Clarence A. Walters, a member of his firm, in that city on a charge of being concerned in undervaluations of woolen goods amounting to about $100,000. Mr. Briggs intends to contest the allegations of fraud by his company. He emphatically denies that there has been any undervaluation of woolen goods exported to America by his firm.

Disabled Ship Towed to Bermuda.

HAMILTON, Bermuda.—A wireless message was received here to-day from the North German Lloyd steamship Kronprinzessin Cecilie saying that on November 28 she passed the disabled steamer Cheruskia of the Hamburg-American steamship line in tow of the steamer Graecia. The Graecia signalled that she would tow the Cheruskia to Bermuda for repairs and supplies.

British Fleet at Montevideo.

MONTEVIDEO, via Galveston, Texas.—The British squadron, under Rear Admiral Farquhar, has arrived here. Rear Admiral Farquhar and his officers called on the President.

Manchester Has Appendicitis.

LONDON.—The Duke of Manchester, whose wife is Helena, daughter of Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, was operated on for appendicitis yesterday. He suffered a relapse to-day and his condition is serious.

GIRL OF 3 BADLY BURNED AT PLAY

Little Pearl Fenton, three years old, who makes her home with Mrs. Mary Etta Cunningham, at No. 55 Buffum street, Lynn, was terribly burned while playing with matches in her room to-day. Her cries aroused Mrs. Cunningham, who ran into the room and extinguished the flames, which were enveloping the child. Mrs. Cunningham, who is forty years old, was badly burned on the hands and body. The girl was hurried to the Lynn Hospital, where the doctors say that she will die.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The population of the United States and its possessions, unofficially estimated by the Census Bureau to be 100,000,000, may fall 5,000,000 short of these figures, according to computations made to-day.

The population of more than half of the States has been announced and a computation based on the percentage of increase in these States compared with the States whose population has not been announced does not bear out the Census Bureau's claim that this census will show 100,000,000 population under the American flag.

The population of twenty-four States has been announced and the total for these does not agree with the estimated population made by Director of the Census Durand before the beginning of the enumeration. His estimate was 90,000,000 in continental United States and 10,000,000 in Porto Rico, the Philippines and the other insular possessions. The following States and their population have been announced:

Rhode Island, 542,674; Michigan, 2,810,173; New Mexico, 327,396; Missouri, 3,293,335; Delaware, 202,322; Vermont, 355,956; Massachusetts, 3,366,416; Arizona, 204,354; Maine, 742,371; Connecticut, 1,114,756; Indiana, 2,700,876; Iowa, 2,224,771; Florida, 751,139; Alabama, 2,138,093; New Hampshire, 430,572; Kansas, 1,690,949; Ohio, 4,767,121; New York, 9,119,279; Illinois, 5,638,591; Maryland, 1,294,450; Nebraska, 1,192,214; Oklahoma, 1,657,155; Minnesota, 2,075,708; Tennessee, 2,184,789.

The total population of these States is 50,819,460, an increase of 9,556,598 over the last census, or an average increase of 15.4 per cent. during the ten years.

The total population of the twenty-two States yet to be given out was at the last census 30,551,212. Estimating their increase during the last ten years to be 15.4 per cent., the average increase for the States already announced, these States would show an approximate gain of 4,701,886. Thus the estimated population of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, and its other possessions should be approximately 86,072,558.

The population of the Philippines, Porto Rico, Hawaii, Tutuila and Guam, now officially estimated by the Census Bureau, is 8,757,131. According to these figures, and including the territorial possessions of the United States, the population should now be approximately 94,829,689. The population of the United States as given under the last census was 76,33,367.

Could Hardly Hear

Senses of Taste and Smell Were Also Greatly Impaired

"I was afflicted with catarrh," writes Eugene Forbes, Lebanon, Kansas. "I took several different medicines, giving each a fair trial, but grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I was about to give up in despair, but concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking three bottles of this medicine I was cured, and have not had any return of the disease."

Hood's Sarsaparilla effects radical and permanent cures of catarrh.

BULLDOG SHOW BEST EVER HERE

The closing of the French bulldog show at Horticultural hall drew a large crowd to-day, including a number of fanciers from New York and Philadelphia. The benching this year was the most attractive of any show ever held here and the little bulldogs, mostly black in color, were bunched with a background of red.

Miss Mary Winthrop, of New York, owner of Never Never Land Kennels, gave a number of valuable specials in the name of her kennels.

Miss Winthrop was a consistent winner in the show with Pouquin Pas. The dogs of the Lawson kennels, Purdy kennels and those of Mr. and Mrs. William Lippman of New York were also winners.

The show brought out one of the best lot of French bulldogs that has met in competition for a long while and although a few upsets occurred the judging of Theodore Offerman, of New York, who made his first appearance, was pronounced good.

One of the surprises of the show was the defeat of Mirette de la Mare, an imported bulldog shown by Mrs. Lawson. Champion Lady Fi Fi, owned by Mrs. William Lippman of New York, won.

A young dog, Noswal Nemo, created a sensation by capturing a number of blues for his owner, Mrs. Lawson.

It was a good selling show, a number of young dogs and puppies having changed hands at a little above the usual prices.

BEAUFORT GETS DUEL CHALLENGE

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Count Alexander Jacques Von Mourik de Beaufort has been challenged to a duel by Baron Von Schiller, a fire eating nobleman of the Austrian court.

Over a lady, certainly, and no less a personage than the late queen of the Belgians. Of course there is another lady involved, Mme. Alexandra Viarda, a Polish actress, but the duel, if duel there be, will hinge upon what the count said about the late Queen of the Belgians and what the baron said about the count's title.

Baron Von Schiller is in town representing his friend, Mme. Alexandra Viarda. While seeking a stage for her engagement, he met Colonel W. A. Thompson of the American Music Hall, where De Beaufort is playing. The baron showed Colonel Thompson a letter Mme. Viarda had received from the late Queen of the Belgians expressing sincere regret that the Queen had missed seeing the actress.

The letter was in French and Colonel Thompson's knowledge of French being limited to the menu card, he handed it to De Beaufort to translate. Count de Beaufort sniffed and tossed the letter back to the colonel, saying:

"That's nothing. Every one who invites the Queen to an entertainment she doesn't care to attend gets similar regrets. Why, if you held a smoker at the club and sent a properly engrossed invitation to the Queen you would get one of those polite regrets."

This enraged the Baron and he immediately challenged the Count to a duel.

ETHEL LENEVE IN NEW YORK?

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A girl bearing a striking resemblance to Ethel Clare LeNeve, for love of whom Dr. H. H. Crippen killed his wife, was held up by the immigration authorities when the White Star liner Majestic arrived to-day from Southampton and Queenstown. The girl was booked as Elizabeth McNaughton, but she became confused when questioned and it was decided to hold her until she could prove her identity. She claimed to be the sister of Thomas McNaughton, an actor.

Word that Miss LeNeve was aboard was current among the Majestic's passengers all the way across. They said that Miss McNaughton closely resembled the pictures of the LeNeve girl and a close watch was kept on her. She kept to her stateroom as much as possible, however, and very little was seen of her on the trip.

Questioned by the immigration officials when the Majestic landed to-day, the girl insisted that she had given her right name.

The mystery surrounding the case was deepened by a dispatch from the British authorities asking the officials here to look out for a Miss Allen of London. The girl, her parents claimed, was a runaway and was coming to America to join the Pillar of Fire, a religious sect of Bound Brook, New Jersey.

At the last moment word was received that Miss Allen would not sail and her name was stricken from the passenger list. It was pointed out that Miss McNaughton occupied stateroom No. 10, which had been reserved for the Allen girl.

Chief Immigration Inspector MacGregor and Inspector Pearsall met the Majestic and ordered Miss McNaughton detained. They refused to say what the outcome would be if she proved to be Miss LeNeve, but it is understood that the officials have been instructed to bar Crippen's sweetheart.

Chief Steward Ross, in charge of the second cabin, was the first to note the striking resemblance between Miss McNaughton and the published photographs of the LeNeve girl. Miss Mary Walker was also under suspicion for a time, but she had no trouble in convincing the authorities of her identity. She was accompanied by her sister Gertrude and came here to visit her uncle, Robert A. Day.

The authorities admitted at noon that they did not believe that Miss McNaughton was Miss LeNeve, but they notified Mrs. Fred Ginnest, a friend of Crippen's murdered wife, of the girl's detention, and asked her to come to New York.

Officials of the Bureau of Immigration said that orders had been issued to the New York immigration authorities to hold Miss LeNeve for a careful investigation if she comes to this country.

MONTAGUE'S FUNNIEST POEM, splendidly illustrated, will be found in the Great City Life Section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

GARMENT WORKERS DANCE IS TO-NIGHT

Arrangements are complete for the annual ball of the Garment Worker's District Council, to be held in Knights of Honor Hall, No. 730 Washington street, this evening, and a record attendance is looked for by those in charge of the affair. Nine different unions, with a total membership of 3,000 men and women connected with the local garment making industry, make up this council. William Cameron is chairman of the committee of arrangements, and Morris Biller, secretary.

FOUR BACK ROW SENATORS TO FRONT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Owing to deaths, four back-row Senators will get desirable seats when Congress convenes Monday. Hughes and Johnston will take the seats formerly occupied by Daniel and McEnery, Rayner will take the seat of Clay, and Bradley will get away from the "Cherokee Strip" and take the place on the Republican side once filled by Dolliver.

LATEST VAUDEVILLE JOKES. You'll get them first in the Great City Life Section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

$800 PAID FOR ONE SILVER GRAY FOX

TEMPLE, Me., Dec. 1.—Charles Huntington has received $800 for the skin of a silver gray fox that he caught in a trap. When Huntington notified the fur buyers one at once offered $600. Huntington was suspicious that the pelt might be worth more, so he hesitated about accepting. The offer was raised to $700 and finally to $800.

BRANDEIS ON HOW TO SAVE $1,000,000 A DAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Louis D. Brandeis, the Boston lawyer, whose offer to show the railroads of the country how they can save $1,000,000 a day in expenses has been accepted, outlined to the AMERICAN to-day the methods by which he believes the saving can be effected.

In four words, Brandeis' remedy for existing conditions is "Conservation of wasted energy." The whole secret, he says, lies in the application of scientific methods in every branch of the business.

Mr. Brandeis said: "You have failed to adopt the science of management. Vice-President Stewart of the Erie said recently there has been no increase of efficiency of employes. We do not get as much work as before the increase of wages. The increase in wage is an absolute loss.

"Under the new science," continued Mr. Brandeis, "higher wages means lower costs. The new science is a complete reversal of the principles under which work is done. The present system is practically a military system. The working man works according to the success that is attained in the way of force or gentler things to get him to work.

"Under the science of management you aid the workingman to accomplish results by using every effort to make possible the largest accomplishment invoking science in the highest form to the humblest occupation of the humblest worker."

The Man at the Bottom.

"It is a matter altogether of scientific application," said the lawyer, "and is based entirely on the practical experience of men who have tried out my theory. I think the great trouble with all forms of business to-day is that too little attention is given to the men at the bottom of the ladder. The president of a concern passes his orders on the vice-president, who passes them in turn to the superintendent, who turns to the foreman, who turns to the laborer.

"But with it all no one gives any attention to the work that the laborer does; or if any attention is given to it, it is of the most superficial character. What I would do is to have everybody work in accordance with scientific methods.

"Fred W. Taylor, formerly president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and one of America's great men, was attracted once by the simple occupation of handling pig iron. He put a series of scientific observers at work, who noted the distance that a gang of laborers had to walk in carrying pig iron from the siding to a car, observed the motion they went through in lifting up the iron in putting it on board the cars and in returning to the pile again. They observed the slant of the platform up which the men had to walk to reach the level of the car and in general they noted the thousand and one little things not perceptible to the average man but significant to a trained observer. As a result of all these observations the discovery was made that whereas that gang of laborers were able under the old conditions to carry only twelve tons of pigiron each per day, under the improved conditions each of them carried forty-seven tons, and none of them was any more tired at the close of the day than he had been when he only carried twelve tons.

Waste in Shovelling.

"It was observed that there was a lot of waste and lost motion in the humble occupation of shovelling. Scientific observers noted the strain necessary in lifting a shovelful of soil, lime or earth. They noted how in tackling a heap of coal there was less strain in going at the coal from the level than from any part of the heap above the level and per contra that a pile of lime could be attacked with a shovel better by digging into it than from shovelling it from the bottom. Finally after a number of practical tests had been made a shovel was devised that held exactly twenty-two pounds, which it was figured out was the exact weight an ordinary laborer could lift in a shovel without injuring himself and without economic loss to his employer. Different styles of shovels were invented for different uses, for coal for lime and for other material.

"The net result of this experiment, which was conducted by Frank B. Gilbreth of New York, was almost to double the capacity of a gang of laborers for shovelling without in any way tiring them more than under the old conditions.

Bricklaying Test.

Even more interesting was another experiment conducted by Mr. Gilbreth, with regard to bricklaying. Scientific observation at first noted the absurdity of making a bricklayer bend down and pick up each brick as it was needed and a movable platform was invented whereby the platform was always kept on a level with the wall that the mechanic was building. Then scientific observation noted that the bricklayer went through the motion of weighing each brick with his hand as he took it up and rejecting the brick if it did not answer his requirements. Scientific observation saw that a large quantity of brick was hauled up each day to the bricklayer only to be rejected, which made it necessary to haul them down again.

"So scientific observation had the bricks weighed and tested. In like manner it was observed that the bricklayer had to handle each brick so as to be sure the right side was out, and that was remedied by having the boys who worked on the movable platform arrange the bricks right side up and out before they reached the bricklayer. Finally, scientific observation saw that the bricklayer with the laying of each brick tapped it with his trowel to set it in place.

"If the brick was of proper weight and the mortar was adjusted properly to that weight," said scientific observation, "the brick of its own weight would fit into the mortar."

"Whereupon that was also remedied and the net result was that 2700 instead of 1000 bricks were laid each day by each bricklayer. The whole principle is simply one of dissecting a bit of work, just as one dissects a flower or a human body. I would have the railroad men attack their problems as Darwin went about his scientific inquiries."

INVITE TAFT TO HOWE MEMORIAL

Mayor Fitzgerald has sent a letter to President William H. Taft inviting him to come to Boston on the evening of January 8, 1911, and deliver a memorial address in Symphony Hall in honor of Julia Ward Howe. The Mayor wrote: "As the son of a Boston mother, you will appreciate the personal characteristics of one whom we have for many years regarded as the very flower of Boston womanhood, and as the chief magistrate of the nation you will also, I am sure, be able to measure her importance as a great national figure, whose name is a household word wherever the 'Battle Hymn of the Republic' is sung throughout the country."

A FEELING OF SECURITY.

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

Swamp-Root is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you will find it on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, fifty-cents and one-dollar.

[Sample Bottle of Swamp-Root Free by Mail.]

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle, free by mail—it will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys. When writing be sure and mention the Boston Daily American.

TORIES CLAIM VICTORY WON

LONDON, Dec. 1. — All the Unionist papers join in the declaration that a Liberal defeat is certain. The Stock Exchange reflects the belief in Tory victory in the veering of the betting odds and the rise in prices of home securities and consols. The Unionist claims are regarded by the Liberals as an ante-election bluff.

Election results which will have been declared by Saturday night should provide a fair indication of the outcome.

At least 100 members, of whom sixty are Unionists, will be elected without contest. Saturday will see polling for forty-five seats, as far as now arranged. Of these twenty-five are held by Liberals. Among these are the Manchester constituencies, which the Unionists are making every effort to capture. Should they succeed, the effect on the rest of the country will be important.

Campaign in Ireland.

In Ireland, where the voting will take place later, the Nationalists are renominating the present members. Shane Leslie, Nationalist, is again contesting Londonderry city, which was lost to the Unionists by a few votes in January.

The O'Brienites are receiving the financial support of the moderates, who consider Redmond's plans impossible and are disgusted with the Orangemen's threats of violence and bloodshed if the existing government for Ireland is changed. They have more candidates than in the last election.

Another surprising change of front by the Conservative leaders is that of Mr. Balfour's relegating tariff reform to the rear as an important issue. His adoption of the referendum is generally attributed to pressure from Unionist free traders, led by Lord Cromer.

Plan To Help Rich.

David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, speaking at Llandrindod Wells, reiterated that the cost of a referendum would be $10,000,000. It was a mere device, he said, to put a more effective weapon in the hands of the wealthy classes. The Liberals would have none of it.

The home secretary, Mr. Churchill, at Sheffield said no day passed without some Tory leader overthrowing an ancient principle of the Tory party. Nothing was more astonishing in this wonderful election than the panic which had overtaken that once proud and powerful party.

Mr. Chruchill was again subjected to suffragist disturbances, several unruly persons being ejected from the hall.

LOUISE M. HAZARD, WHO SUES YOUTH FOR $45,000 BALM

LOUISE MINERVA HAZARD

MARRIED TO BREAK TROTH

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 30.—Marrying another girl, and that in a very great hurry, it has ben learned, was the only way that Carl Hockett, now a benedict of Uxbridge, Mass., found to break his engagement to Miss Louise Minerva Hazard of this city, who is now suing him for $45,000 for breach of promise. Carl, it is learned, after making a marriage contract with Miss Hazard, came to this city and tried to get out of the engagement.

This is what Miss Hazard did to keep him engaged to her: First, she found out the name of the other girl in the case, Miss Laura Moore, of Uxbridge, now Mrs. Hockett, and wrote to her. Then she inserted notices of her engagement to Carl in the Worcester county papers. This not sufficing, she wrote to the boy's parents, and finally went to them and read his love letters to the boy's mother.

PHELPS MURDER TRIAL NEAR END

GREENFIELD, Dec. 1.—Six men who accompanied Deputy Sheriff Emmet F. Haskins when he went to the home of Silas N. Phelps at Monroe Bridge to arrest Phelps last June, and who were present when Haskins is alleged to have been murdered by Phelps, testified for the government at the Phelps trial. The government will finish its case today.

They all related that Haskins went to the house and demanded admission, stating to those inside that he was a deputy sheriff and was there to arrest Phelps on the charge of stabbing Superintendent Penman of the Ramage Paper Company.

They told of the refusal to open the door and of the breaking in of the door and the shooting of Haskins. These witnesses were Andrew McIntyre, Emil S. Lowe, John Sey, George F. Bishop, Charles S. Newell and George Phelps.

George Phelps, a Selectman of Monroe, testified that Silas Phelps had twice called him on the telephone, once to tell him that he had stabbed Penman and the second time to inform him that there was a corpse lying on his front steps.

Two of the witnesses called were Adelaide E. Ramage, wife of one of the owners of the paper mill, and Dr. M. O. Eddy, who attended Penman.

TREADWAY OPPOSES OPEN DEER SEASON

STOCKBRIDGE, Dec. 1.—Before leaving for Bermuda Senator Allen T. Treadway issued the following statement regarding the open season on deer: "As the open season on deer has expired for this year, it is fitting that the people of the counties affected by Chapter 545 of the Acts of 1910 should begin to plan for another year. "Unless section 2 of this act is repealed at the coming session of the Legislature, the open season will continue. As a member of last year's Legislature, I was opposed to having an open season, and told the chairman of the Commission on Fisheries and Game that I did not believe such legislation would meet with the approval of the people in this section."

took a walk through the streets of East Cambridge. They smoked cigars and chatted pleasantly as they went along in charge of court officers. The jurors all looked to be in the best health and spirits.

Mrs. Glover arrived at the court house at 8:45 o'clock. She came from Waltham by trolley, coming down to East Cambridge from Harvard square. At the court house she tried to escape the newspaper photographers by going down Second street and into the rear of the building, but was unsuccessful. She was accompanied by Mrs. Freeman. Mrs. Glover was dressed as yesterday.

Hattie Le Blanc was brought over from the jail by Deputy Rhodes at fourteen minutes of nine. A crowd of several hundred crowded about the pair as they crossed the street.

Hattie was taken into the Sheriff's office to wait for the opening of court. She appeared to be in good spirits.

Mrs. Glover Enters Room.

Hattie Le Blanc entered the court room at one minute of 9 o'clock. The jury followed one minute later. They were followed by the counsel for both sides, Higgins leading and Johnson bringing up the rear.

The court room was filled long before the opening of court. The largest number of women that have been in attendance since the opening of the trial were present to-day. Judge Bond came in at two minutes after 9 o'clock. The jury was polled and after Hattie Le Blanc had answered to her name court was formally opened.

One moment later District Attorney Higgins signalled to the officer at the door, and Mrs. Glover entered and took the witness stand. It was then 9:05 o'clock. She was questioned by Mr. Wier:

Q.—What is your height, Mrs. Glover? A.—Five feet three inches.

Q.—How much did you weigh on November 20, 1909? A.—One hundred and fifteen pounds.

Q.—How much do you weigh at present? A.—I weighed myself recently on two scales. On one I weighed 116 pounds and on the other 120.

Q.—Then you weigh about the same now as you did about November 20, 1909? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Hattie Le Blanc have any keys to your house? A.—She did.

Candy in the Automobile.

Q.—To what doors? A.—To the back door and she had a latch key for the front door.

Q.—Was that the only one that was kept locked—the front door? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you had any talk with Hattie Le Blanc on November 20, 1909, or shortly before as to what you were going to do with her? A.—Well, she was going home Christmas time.

Q.—Do you remember what Hattie said while you and she and Mr. Glover and Mr. and Mrs. Freeman and the Freeman boy were in the automobile on November 20, 1909? A.—She said something, but I don't remember what it was.

Q.—That day did you notice Mr. Glover pass a box of candy to Mrs. Freeman? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Hattie say anything about that? A.—Yes, Hattie told me to tell Mr. Glover not to make love to Mrs. Freeman.

Q.—Did Hattie take any of the candy when it was passed to her? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever go hunting with Mr. Glover? A.—I did.

Q.—How many times? A.—I couldn't say. Quite a number of times I went to Maine with him. The first time was 1902, the next 1903.

Tried to Shoot Woodpecker.

Q.—Did you ever shoot any game on those trips? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever try? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What did you ever try to kill? A.—I tried to shoot a woodpecker once, but I never shot anything in my life.

Q.—Did you ever shoot any of Mr. Glover's guns? A.—I fired the shotgun once at a target.

Q.—Was it a custom to have revolvers on those trips? A.—It was.

Q.—Was it with a revolver that you tried to shoot a woodpecker? A.—Yes.

WALTHAM JURIST WHO IS HEARING LE BLANC TRIAL

JUDGE BOND

Q.—Do you know if Hattie had any money out there at the football game on November 20? A.—Yes, she lent a dollar to Mr. Glover.

Q.—Did she have any more money? A.—Something like 50 or 75 cents.

Q.—Was this money, borrowed by Mr. Glover from Hattie, returned? A.—Yes, I returned it to her at the laundry after the football game.

Aided the Le Blanc Family.

Q.—Did you do anything else for the Le Blanc family down in West Arichat except to bring the three girls to the States? A.—Yes, I sent clothing for the younger ones and I sent money so that they could go to school.

Q.—When was this? A.—In the Summer of 1907.

Q.—Under what circumstances did you send this money and the clothing? A.—The little girls of the family wrote me that they had no money for shoes to go to school so I sent them clothing, shoes and money.

Q.—Now what did you go to the hospital for on that night of November 20? A.—I went there to see my husband.

This ended Mrs. Glover's direct examination. When it was so announced Attorney Johnson turned to Mr. Higgins and asked if Dr. Cousens was going to be called.

"I will call him when he comes, but he is not here yet," answered Mr. Higgins.

Mrs. Glover then steadied herself, grasped the stand with both hands and prepared for the ordeal of cross-examination at the hands of Attorney Johnson.

Mrs. Glover Shows Anger.

Q.—Mrs. Glover, where was your father born? A.—I don't know, I never heard.

Q.—Didn't you once testify that he was born in Cape Breton? A.—Yes, he was born there somewhere; I don't know just where.

Q.—What was your mother's name. A.—Charlotte.

Q.—Where was she born? A.—I said before West Arichat, but I find I was mistaken. She was born in Cape Breton.

Q.—What is your name? A.—Lillian Marie Le Blanc.

Up to this time Mrs. Glover had been calm, but at this point she showed traces of anger.

Q.—How about Marie Genevieve Le Blanc? A.—I never heard of that name.

Q.—Have you ever gone by any other name that Lillian Marie Le Blanc? A.—What do you mean by that?

Q.—Don't you know what I mean when I ask you if you ever went by any other name? Let me ask you again, have you ever heard of Lillian Walker? A.—No.

Q.—Who is Lina? A.—I don't remember her, I never heard of her.

Letters Under False Name.

Q.—Don't you remember a time when you and Lina were chums and went around together all the time? A.—No.

Q.—Well, I will remind you again later in the day. (District Attorney Higgins objected to this remark, and Mr. Johnson withdrew it.)

Q.—Who is Minnie Everett Clark? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you never hear the name? A.—Well, Mrs. Maud Holliday Glover used to write to me under that name.

Q.—Did you receive any other letters under the name of Maud Everett Clark? A.—No.

Q.—I beg your pardon—as Minnie Everett Clark? A.—Yes.

Q.—You received these while you and Glover were married? A.—Yes.

Q.—Under this assumed name? A.—Yes.

Q.—These were letters that didn't come to the house? A.—Yes.

Q.—You went to the postoffice for them? A.—Yes.

Q.—Often? A.—Well, not often.

Q.—But steadily over a long period, year after year? A.—Yes.

The interest in the examination at this point was intense. One could almost hear gasps over the courtroom as each new question was put to Mrs. Glover.

Q.—And that was not your name? A.—No.

Q.—How long did you live in West Arichat? A.—Left as a child.

Q.—How old? A.—Can't say.

(Mrs. Glover gave these answers as they are written. She cut her sentences short and eliminated all unnecessary words.)

Q.—Have you been back since? A.—Yes.

Q.—Frequently? A.—I can't say.

Q.—When last? A.—1907.

Q.—When before then? A.—1906.

Q.—Who was with you in 1907? A.—I was alone.

Q.—Who was with you in '06? A.—Mr. Glover.

Q.—Your mother was dead in 1907; who did you visit? A.—Mrs. Doiron.

Q.—Mrs. Louie Doiron? A.—No.

Q.—Well, who was it then? A.—Mrs. Louis Doiron.

"All right, we won't quibble," said Mr. Johnson.

Q.—Had your mother lived with Mrs. Doiron before she died? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long? A.—I can't say.

Smiles for First Time.

Mrs. Glover was shown several pictures at this point.

Q.—Are these pictures of your home? A.—No, my mother's home.

Q.—They are the home where you lived aren't they? A.—I suppose, so. I was very little and don't remember, you know. (Mrs. Glover smiled here for the first time.)

Q.—You left Arichat when you were eleven years old, is that correct? A.—I couldn't say the exact time, but I was working at the Nonantum Mills when I was eleven.

Q.—And your father and mother lived then? A.—In Newton.

Q.—Do you remember when they went back to West Arichat? A.—A short time after they came up here. I can't say exactly when—either in 1884 or 1885.

Q.—Did some of your brothers and sisters come with them when they came to Newton? A.—Yes, there were eight or nine children in the family and they all came.

Again Loses Her Temper.

Q.—Who remained here after your father and mother went back to West Arichat. A.—My two sisters did, I did and my second brother to the oldest did.

Q.—Where did you then live when your father and mother went back? A.—In East Boston.

Q.—With whom? A.—With a woman.

Q.—Do you know what her address was? A.—I couldn't say.

Q.—What were you doing then? A.—I was a clerk in a store.

Q.—What is the lady's name with whom you roomed? A.—I couldn't remember the lady.

Q.—With whom did you room? A.—I roomed with this woman.

Mrs. Glover showed unmistakable signs of anger at this point.

Q.—Wasn't there another girl of about your same age with whom you roomed at that time? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Did you have a sister named Marie? A.—Yes, there was one named Marie and one named Maria.

Q.—And was one of those married to Frank Delorey? A.—Yes.

Recalls "Lina's" Name.

Q.—Where does he live now? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Who was your girl chum in those days? A.—I didn't have any except the girls I worked with.

Q.—Wasn't there a wedding which you attended where you met a girl with whom you chummed for a good while after? A.—The only wedding I ever attended was my sister's wedding.

Q.—Was there a brunette called Lina with whom you chummed in those days? A.—There was a girl named Elizabeth.

Q.—Did you room with her in a good many places? A.—No, I did not. I roomed with her in one place.

Q.—And after that you went to live in Webster avenue, Boston, later didn't you? A.—I might have; that's in the North End?

Q.—Don't you know whether you did or not? A.—No.

Mrs. Glover again displayed signs of anger.

Q.—Did you ever live at No. 45 Chambers street, Boston? A.—Yes.

Q.—With whom did you room there? A.—Lina.

Q.—Ah, you call her Lina, then. Why did you call her Lina instead of Elizabeth? A.—Because you called her Lina.

Q.—Wasn't it because of the recollection of the old days? A.—No, I always called her Lizzie.

First Met Clarence Glover.

Q.—When did you first meet any of Clarence Glover's family? A.—I met Arthur some time ago.

Q.—Under what circumstances? A.—Well, Arthur "picked up" Lina in a restaurant.

Q.—I see you call her Lina now? A.—Well, you called her Lina so that's why I said that.

Q.—So, Arthur "picked up" Lina? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you met Arthur? A.—Yes.

Q.—And it was through Arthur that you met Clarence? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Clarence was introduced to you as Arthur's brother? A.—No, he was first introduced to me as Clarence Gardner.

Q.—Where were you living then? A.—At No. 45 Cambridge street.

Q.—Who was living with you? A.—Lizzie.

Q.—Did you meet Clarence Glover often after that? A.—Yes.

Q.—And did you become engaged? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long after this meeting in the restaurant was it that you became engaged to Clarence? A.—I became engaged in a few months.

Q.—And how old were you then? A.—I was about sixteen.

Q.—When did you begin to live with Clarence Glover? A.—After we were married.

Two Weddings With Glover.

Q.—And when were you married? A.—On January 20, 1890.

Q.—But you lived with Clarence Glover before your marriage didn't you. A.—I beg your pardon, Mr. Johnson, I didn't.

Q.—Where did you live? A.—At No. 29 Appleton street.

Q.—Who married you? A.—We were married by the Rev. Mr. Adams, an Episcopalian minister.

Q.—Did you ever see a Rev. Robert B. Parker of Providence? A.—Yes.

Q.—Well, he married you, too, didn't he? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did the Rev. Mr. Parker marry you? A.—On June 26, 1900.

Q.—And you were married again to Clarence F. Glover? A.—Yes.

Q.—So you had two ceremonies of ten years apart with Clarence? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the reason for this? A.—Well, my sister found out that the first marriage was not a legal marriage, and so we had the second marriage.

Attorney Johnson then presented an attested copy of the declaration taken out before the marriage in Providence. It was read to the jury given as answers of questions by Glover and Miss Lillian Le Blanc.

A Trip to California.

Q.—Did you make answer to these questions on this declaration? A.—Mr. Glover wrote out the paper.

Q.—But you signed it? A.—Well, I can't remember.

Q.—This declaration says that you were born in East Boston. If you said that at the time, that was a lie, wasn't it? A.—Yes, it was wrong; I was not born in East Boston.

Q.—This declaration says that your father and mother were born in France. That's untrue also, isn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you any marriage certificate of that first marriage? A.—No.

Q.—Had you been living with Mr. Glover all those ten years? A.—What ten years?

Q.—The ten years between the two marri[illegible]? A.—No.

Q.—When did you cease living with him a[illegible] when my sister told me that the marriage was illegal.

Q.—How long after the marriage ceremony was this? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Well, where did you go then to live? A.—I went to California.

Q.—Who went with you? A.—I went alone.

Then Became a Book Agent.

Q.—Who came back with you? A.—I came back alone.

Q.—Why did you go to California? A.—I went for my health.

Q.—Where did you first live in Boston with Mr. Glover as his wife? A.—No. 29 Appleton street.

Q.—Who lived in the house there? A.—His brothers Arthur and Albert and their family.

Q.—What did Glover do? A.—He was employed in the paper mache business, making forms.

Q.—Well, after leaving Glover what did you do? A.—I went out canvassing for books.

Q.—What was the exact reason for your leaving Mr. Glover? A.—My sister and Mr. Glover had a talk about the marriage and my sister wouldn't allow us to live together. She believed the marriage illegal.

Q.—Where did you go to live then? A.—I lived at my sister's for about a year.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I went out canvassing for books. I was canvassing with a blind woman. I went to New Jersey, Illinois and all over the country.

Q.—How long were you engaged in this? A.—Well, I had a snap and I stayed as long as I could hold the position.

Verbal Duel With Attorney.

Q.—Well, what did you do then? A.—I came back to Boston and started in the tailoring business.

Q.—Where did you live in Boston? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—There are quite a few things that you don't seem to remember? A.—Well, I think I am doing pretty well, Mr. Johnson. You are going back for a century. I can't remember everything in a century.

Q.—No, not a century? A.—Well, Mr. Johnson I think I am doing pretty well to recall the things that I have that happened so many, many years ago.

Q.—Well, let me see if I can't recall to your recollection where you lived in Boston after your canvassing trip? Didn't you live on Shawmut avenue? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—Who else lived there? A.—Well, Lizzie lived there.

Q.—Who else? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—And Lizzie is Lina? A.—Well, yes.

Q.—Now, did you meet Clarence Glover during this time that you were in Boston? A.—Yes.

Q.—Paid your expenses somewhat, didn't he? A.—No, he had little or no money.

Man Cousin Enters the Case.

Q.—Didn't he live with you for extended periods? A.—No, he'd simply come and we'd go to the theatre and then I'd go home.

Q.—Did you ever live in a house with Fred Tereau? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who paid the rent? A.—He did.

Q.—He was your cousin? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you and Fred and Lina lived there? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was your business? A.—Tailoring.

Q.—What did you do after that? A.—Canvassing.

Q.—Did Glover ever see Fred? A.—Mr. Glover never saw Fred Tereau in his life.

Q.—Did he ever come to that house? A.—No.

Q.—He knew you were there, didn't he? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see him often? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you keep him away from Fred? A.—No.

Q.—You never took him to the house? A.—No.

Q.—How long were you and Fred there? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Where is he now? A.—I can't say.

Q.—Have you any idea? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you since him since? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see him in West Arichat once after you were living with Glover? A.—No.

Her Memory Proves Faulty.

Q.—Don't you remember going down there once and seeing him? A.—That's news to me, Mr. Johnson. (Mrs. Glover smiled broadly.)

Q.—Did you ever live on Cobb street? A.—That was Fred's house.

Q.—I thought that was on Shawmut avenue? A.—No.

Q.—How long were you there? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What number was it? A.—I can't say.

Q.—What was the character of that neighborhood? A.—Well, it was the best I could afford.

Q.—Do you remember a girl that came down from Cape Breton to Gloucester and that you got up to that house? A.—I don't remember anything of that kind.

Q.—If I understood you then, after your canvassing tour, you went to live on Cobb street? A.—I didn't say that. I said I stayed with my sister for a while.

Q.—Long? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Remember any other place you stayed between times? A.—No.

Q.—When did you live on Cobb street? A.—I can't say.

Q.—Where did you live after that? A.—That's too long ago for me to remember, Mr. Johnson.

Q.—Did you go from Cobb street to Waltham? A.—No.

Never Evicted From House.

Q.—Where did you live in Waltham? A.—In a house on Derby street belonging to Mrs. Taylor.

Q.—How long were you there? A.—One year.

Q.—Were you put out of that house? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know Constable Chase? A.—I can't say I do.

Q.—Did you ever see him? A.—Seems to me I did.

Q.—Did you see him or get a notice from him just before leaving the Taylor house? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know Mrs. Taylor's son Frank? A.—That's the big son, isn't it?

Q.—Yes? A.—He is the man I hired the house from.

Q.—Where did you go from Derby street? A.—To Adams street.

Q.—What was your business there? A.—I had several. I did sewing for anybody that wanted it. I bought pawn tickets and I had a hair dressing parlor on Winter street.

Q.—Who ran that for you? A.—There was a Mrs. Palmer and a Mrs. Smith.

Q.—What was their first names? A.—I can't say.

Q.—Where are they now? A.—Can't say.

Also Kept a Bicycle Shop.

Q.—Who else kept this place for you? A.—I can't say there were others, but I don't remember.

Q.—How long were you in that business? A.—Three years.

Q.—What business were you in before that if any? A.—Shall I start when I was young.

Q.—Yes? A.—Well, when I was sixteen I did dressmaking in Newton. I worked all night in a mill at a dollar a night. I got $3.50 for working in the day time. I was in the second-hand bicycle business with Fred Tereau. I had invested some money in that.

Q.—Where did you get the money; did you save it from your dollar a day? A.—I got it from my various works.

Q.—What did you do after living in Cobb street? A.—Canvassing.

Q.—I thought that was first? A.—Well, I'm telling all I've done, I can't keep the order.

Q.—What else? A.—I did dressmaking for a woman in New York.

Q.—What was her name? A.—I can't say; this was all a century ago; I can't remember.

Q.—Why is it that you don't remember these names? A.—Why, they were just common names; they didn't stick in my mind.

Q.—Well, you remembered Mrs. Smith, that's a common name? A.—Yes, I just happened to remember that I called her Miss Smith.

Q.—But that was after she was married? A.—No, she was married, but I called her Miss Smith as I do all married women. That's a habit of mine to say Miss instead of Mrs.

Q.—Have we got all the business that you were in before you went to live wi[th] Mr. Glover at Waltham? A.—I addressed envelopes for $1 a day on Tremont street, Boston, for a Mr. Smith.

Q.—When was that and what is Mr. Smith's full name and what is the full address where you worked? A.—I couldn't tell you what his full name is. I don't know where he lives now, but it was at No. 168 Tremont street that I worked for him.

Q.—What other businesses were you in prior to going to Waltham? A.—I have been a milliner and am doing that work now. I have been a tailoress for K. Baum for a number of years off and on. He was at No. 46 Chauncy street and I worked for him whenever I could get the work. I made pockets in pants by piece work. I also worked on vests.

Mrs. Glover was plainly more nervous than she ever appeared during her entire appearance in court either in this case or any other.

Q.—Was there any other business that you were in prior to going to Waltham. A.—I would take dresses and wrappers and kimonos home to work on them for a firm on Chauncy street. That was twenty-six years ago.

Bought Out Laundry Business.

Q.—Any other business? A.—Yes, I was in the laundry business. I bought out a Mr. Tate at No. 129 Appleton street, Boston. I bought his business for $75 and Mr. Glover and I ran it.

Q.—Where were you living then? A.—Columbus avenue.

Q.—Where was Mr. Glover living then? A.—Mr. Glover lived on Columbus avenue.

Q.—Did Mr. Glover live with you at that time? A.—He lived in the same house.

Q.—Were you in any other businesses? A.—I bought a laundry route in Boston after I had gone into the tinware business?

Q.—When was that? A.—1893 or 1894.

Q.—Where did you conduct the laundry route from? A.—Right from the house.

Q.—Where did you live at that time? A.—Columbus avenue.

Q.—The same place which you have spoken of before? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mr. Glover living there then? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where else did you live prior to going to Waltham? A.—No. 148 Franklin street.

Q.—When was that? A.—I couldn't say.

Q.—Was Mr. Glover in the tinware bu[s]iness with you? A.—Yes, I put him i[n] manager and I took care of the trade. bought at wholesale and sold for what we could get. We sold steam coo[kers] when they first came into the market.

Laughter in Court Room.

Q.—What other business were you A.—I learned to be a cook and I to[ok] care of babies.

Q.—When were you a cook? A.—When work was dull in the mill I would do cooking for families in Newton, for anybody who would take me for a greenhorn, and I was glad to go into any family for $1 a week for the rest when work was dull.

Q.—Were you in any other business? A.—I worked in a can factory on Purchase street. My father worked there and got me a job there.

Q.—Were you in any other business? A.—I did a lot of fancy work.

Q.—Anything else? A.—That's all I can think of.

Q.—Can you tell us any other places where you lived? A.—I made my headquarters on Columbus avenue?

Q.—Did Mr. Glover make it his headquarters too? A.—No, I can't say that he did. If he was out of work he would come around there.

Q.—Where else did you live? A.—I lived on Gainsboro street in 1896 for little over a year.

Q.—Who lived there with you? A.—One of my brothers, William, also Toby, also a young lady who used to sing in the church.

Q.—That wasn't Lina, was it? A.—No, sir. (Laughter in court room and the officers had to rap for order.)

Q.—Did you live in any other places? A.—Yes, I remember living on Beacon Hill, but I couldn't say the street. That was when I was fourteen.

Q.—Was that on Hancock street? A.—No, I never lived on Hancock street.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine.

Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to INSIST upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, giving rise to frequent headache, backache, dragging-down pain or distress and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages cloth-bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Q.—Where else did you live? A.—I lived on Cambridge street, Shawmut avenue and Chambers street.

Q.—Were you ever on the stage? A.—Yes, I have been.

Q.—When was that? A.—A long time ago.

Was "Statue" on Stage.

Q.—In what capacity? A.—I was a marble statue. (Another uproar followed this answer and order was restored with difficulty.)

Q.—How long did you occupy that position? A.—Not very long. About two weeks I think.

Q.—Where was that? A.—In Canada.

Q.—How old were you then? A.—Twenty-one.

Q.—Were there any other things which you did or any other places where you lived that you can now tell us of? A.—No.

Q.—Were there any other things that you did on the stage? A.—Not anything that I can remember. If I had an education maybe I could have done better.

Q.—That time that you were on the stage were you on the road for a couple of weeks? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you lived on Derby street what business were you in? A.—I ran a hairdressing parlor and I did dressmaking.

Q.—Was Mr. Glover there at that time? A.—No.

Q.—What was Mr. Glover doing then? A.—He was a laundry collector for Mr. Sims of Waltham.

Q.—How long did you live on Derby street and where did you go from there? A.—I lived there one year and then moved to Adams street. I kept house in both places.

Q.—When did you live at Adams street? A.—1900.

Q.—Where did you go from Adams street? A.—Park lane.

Q.—Did you live with Edgar F. Webster? A.—I never did.

Q.—Did you live on Harris street, Waltham? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you live with Mr. Webster for over a year? A.—I did not.

Q.—How long did you live at Harris street? A.—Just long enough to take a rest; I should say three months.

Q.—On June 20, 1900, the time you were married, where did you live? A.—Adams street.

Admits Target Practice.

Q.—When did you give up the hairdressing parlors? A.—When the lease ran [illegible]t someone else took it.

Q.—Who worked for you at Park lane—[illegible]at girl? A.—A girl named Fannie. I [illegible]n't know her last name.

Q.—Any other? A.—A girl named Jo[illegible]phine.

Q.—Where is she now? A.—She is married; I suppose she is with her husband.

Q.—Any other maids? A.—Minnie Levine. She came from Nova Scotia somewhere. John Burton also worked for me and a girl named Alma Smith.

Q.—Was Alma married when she worked for you? A.—She was a crazy thing. She would get a letter and sit down and cry over it for an hour at a time. She came to work for me October 20, and she left December 20 of the following year.

Q.—Then she wasn't so crazy so but that you kept her in your employ for one year and two months? A.—I kept her out of kindness.

Q.—Did you and your husband do a good deal of target practice at the Park Lane house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you do any target shooting with a revolver there? A.—Yes.

Used Husband's Revolvers.

Q.—What other guns did you shoot with at targets there? A.—A little 22 caliber. I don't know whether it was a rifle or a gun.

Q.—Did you also shoot with a revolver at targets there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever do any shooting at a target? A.—I have.

Q.—Have you got a cousin named John Forrest? A.—I never saw him or never heard of him.

Q.—Well, have you got any relative near or distant who used to visit you at the Park Lane House on Sundays? A.—No.

Q.—Take a look at these pictures which I hand you and see if that refreshes your memory? A.—I never saw either of those men.

Q.—Where did you do the target practise at the Park Lane house? A.—In the back of the house.

Q.—What did you shoot at? A.—A piece of newspaper or a bullseye.

Q.—What was the size of the revolvers that you shot with? A.—I don't know—whatever he gave me.

Q.—So that at various times you have used all of the revolvers which he had? A.—I might have.

Firearms Always Available.

Q.—How often were the revolvers cleaned? A.—Mr. Glover cleaned them every Sunday.

Q.—Did you assist him? A.—I would give him a rag if he wanted it.

Q.—So that you had a regular arsenal at the house almost all the time? A.—He always had a good many pistols.

Q.—And they were always available, were they not? A.—They were always there for anyone to look at.

Q.—Have you ever shot anything besides a revolver or a rifle? A.—I shot a shotgun once.

Q.—Did you ever shoot any of your husband's shotguns? A.—Only once, because it kicked one time and cut a part of the guide's nose off.

Q.—Is that a picture of you? (The witness was handed a photograph.) A.—Yes.

Q.—Is that a shotgun or a rifle which you are holding? A.—A rifle.

Q.—Where was the picture taken? A.—Jackman, Me.

More Photographs Identified.

Q.—Is that a picture of you? (The witness was handed another photo.) A.—It is.

Q.—What is that in your hand in the picture? A.—It looks like the little 22.

Q.—Where was that taken? A.—At Karrabasset, Me., about eight years ago, I think.

Q.—Is this a picture of you? (The witness was handed a third photo.) A.—It is. It was taken down in Maine.

Q.—What kind of a firearm is that you have there? A.—A shotgun; I don't know; whatever was handed me just so that I could have a picture taken.

Q.—Did you write these four sheets of paper? (Mr. Johnson handed the witness a letter.) A.—I suppose I did for I write all of Hattie's letters. That is to her little sister.

Q.—Did you write these three sheets which I hand you? A.—Yes, I did.

The witness then admitted writing four other letters. She was then handed a picture of a man and she was asked.

Q.—Did you ever see that picture before? A.—Yes, that is young Mr. Fayles.

Q.—What is his full name? A.—I don't remember.

Hattie Le Blanc's Engagement.

Q.—Where does he live? A.—Centerville, N. B.

Q.—Did you ever have that photograph? A.—Mr. Glover owned it.

Q.—What did you do with it? A.—I gave it to Hattie.

Q.—When did you last see it? A.—The last time I saw it was when Hattie and I mailed it.

Q.—Who did you mail it to? A.—Hattie's mother.

Q.—Was there a letter written with it? A.—Yes.

Q.—In that letter did you say that Hattie was engaged to that man? A.—I might have.

Q.—You told her parents that Hattie was engaged to this man? A.—I wrote whatever Hattie told me.

Q.—Answer my question yes or no. A.—I wrote whatever Hattie told me.

Q.—Did you write to Hattie's parents that Hattie was engaged to this man? A.—I don't know as I did.

Q.—Did you write to Hattie's parents and tell them that Hattie was engaged to this man and that Hattie was going to marry him? A.—I wrote what Hattie wanted me to write.

Q.—Not what Hattie wanted you to write, but did you write that to her parents. A.—I wrote what Hattie said.

Called Him Hattie's Beau.

Q.—And you said in that letter that Hattie was engaged to marry this man, didn't you? A.—I don't think I did; I simply said it was Hattie's beau.

Q.—Did you write in that letter to the effect that the picture was that of a man Hattie was going to marry? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Don't you know whether you did or not? A.—I might and I might not have.

Q.—What explanation did you put in the letter for sending the photograph? A.—Simply that it was Hattie's beau. She never saw the man in her life.

Q.—And you knew it, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then why did you write that to her parents? A.—I simply wrote what Hattie told me to.

Q.—You were Hattie's mistress were you not? A.—No.

Q.—You caused Hattie to come here didn't you? A.—Not at all.

Q.—She came here because you sent her money didn't she? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you had charge of her while she was here didn't you? A.—No.

Letters to the Police.

Q.—You took care of Hattie while she was here didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And yet you wrote something to her parents which you knew was not true, didn't you? A.—I can't remember.

Q.—If you wrote to her parents that Hattie was engaged to this man it was not true was it? A.—I wrote whatever Hattie told me.

Q.—Well, if you said in that letter that she was engaged to marry this man it was not true was it? A.—I couldn't say so.

Q.—Well, the fact was that she was not engaged to him? A.—She never saw him in her life.

Q.—Did Mrs. Sampson write letters to you for Hattie? A.—Yes, I believe so.

Q.—And you put some of those letters in the fire, didn't you? A.—I didn't know that I did.

Q.—Don't you remember throwing any letters in the fire? A.—No.

Q.—You have read letters to the police, letters that were sent to Hattie since Mr. Glover's death, haven't you? A.—Yes, I have.

Q.—Where are these letters now? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you give some or all of them to the police? A.—The police may have taken some.

Those Vanishing Letters.

Q.—Well after you read them to the police what did you do with them? A.—I put them in a private box in my desk.

Q.—Who had the key to that box? A.—I had a key, but the box was so that almost anybody could get to it.

Q.—Are the letters in that box now? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—When did they fly out of the box? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Now Mrs. Glover, I want to find out about those letters. Who got them—out with it—let's have the truth you know? A.—Well, I don't know, Mr. Johnson; I don't think the letters are in the box, but they might be somewhere around the house. I might get them if I made a search for them.

Q.—Are you sure they are not destroyed? A.—I destroyed quite a few letters and perhaps some of them were destroyed.

Q.—What right had you to go up to Hattie's room, to Hattie's trunk and take letters that belonged to Hattie. A.—I considered the letters were mine, they were addressed to me and I simply read their contents to Hattie.

Q.—As a matter of fact these letters have vanished and you know they have, don't you, Mrs. Glover? A.—Well, about everything of mine has vanished.

Another Tilt With Lawyer.

Q.—Explain what you mean by that. A.—Well, after my husband's death about everybody seemed to want to get about everything I possessed and in one way or another about all my possessions have gone.

Q.—Who got these things? A.—Well, you tried to get some.

Q.—What do you mean by that? A.—Well, you sent over for all of Hattie's things, clothes and so forth and I packed them up and left them in the hallway for you.

Q.—Well, you know who took them, don't you? It was your brother William. A.—Yes, but they were there in the house for six weeks. They made a pile six times as big as myself. Perhaps some of Hattie's things are in that bundle. I did it up. I did my part.

Q.—Did Mr. Elmore get anything from the house? A.—Well, some things, yes.

Q.—Now to get back to those letters. Why don't you tell the truth, Mrs. Glover?

District Attorney Higgins objected to this, and Judge Bond upheld him. Mrs. Glover answered that she was telling the truth.

Q.—Were the letters in the bundle? A.—I don't know. I put everything of Hattie's in this bundle. It was three or four times as big as I am.

Q.—To whom did you read those letters? A.—To Mr. McKenna, Officer Curran and another man.

Lawyers Clash Over Letters.

A short recess was taken at this point. When court resumed Mrs. Glover continued her testimony.

Q.—One more question about these letters, were they addressed outside to you and inside to Hattie? A.—I just found out from Mr. Tupper downstairs that these letters were exhibits in the will case.

Q.—You talked to Tupper during the recess then? A.—Yes.

(A photo of one of the letters was shown Mrs. Glover) Q.—Is this one of the letters you read to the police? A.—They look the same, they might be, but I could not swear to it.

Q.—Ever read these letters before?

"We will produce these letters if asked," said Mr. Higgins, objecting to the question.

"I do ask it," said Mr. Johnson. "I sought to get them by a bill in equity and Mr. Higgins put in a pleading preventing my getting them. I will produce the record on this."

Judge Bond said that the witness had better read it and tell whether she had seen the letter before.

Mrs. Glover said: "This letter is written by Eva, an eight-year-old girl. Even if I read it I couldn't tell whether I had seen it before. I could not even tell whether I had received it."

At a Moving Picture Show.

Q.—I insist that you read the letter? A.—I can't speak about this, it isn't even dated as to time.

Q.—Was this letter offered in the will case? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Were you in the court house in Boston in September, 1910? A.—I might have been.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—My attorney.

Q.—Any ladies? A.—There might have been.

Q.—Who sat on your left? A.—Why, there was a lady sitting there.

Q.—Who was she? A.—Mrs. DeRoche.

Q.—Who was she? A.—She was a lady.

Q.—Where did she live? A.—She lives in Roxbury, I don't know just where.

Q.—Did you ever go to a moving picture show with her? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who sat in front and behind you? A.—I can't say.

Q.—Did you mention Hattie's name loud enough to be heard? A.—I think not.

Q.—Can you swear that you didn't? Didn't you say loud enough to be heard—

District Attorney Higgins interrupted and asked that the question first be told to the court. This was done.

Mr. Higgins Objects.

Q.—Didn't you say to this lady that you wanted to give Hattie to the police Sunday, but that a certain person, whose name I will not give, would not let you? A.—No, nothing of the kind.

Q.—Was there any talk of Hattie and the police? A.—No.

Q.—Was there any talk about Hattie? A.—Why, yes. A picture was shown on the program and the lady asked me if Hattie was as pretty as that. I said prettier.

Hattie smiled broadly at this answer.

"I insist that Mr. Johnson give the name of the person who prevented her giving Hattie to the police at this time," said Mr. Higgins.

"I don't care to refresh the witness's recollection further at this point."

"Then I shall certainly put the question in myself when I come to it," said Higgins.

Q.—Is this not the photograph of a letter acknowledging $2 that you had sent to West Arichat?

Higgins objected to putting in the photo instead of the letter itself.

Rebuke From the Court.

Attorney Johnson said: "I have been trying to get these letters for months and Mr. Higgins knows it."

"I don't know anything of the kind," said Mr. Higgins, with apparent heat. "And you know perfectly well that I don't."

"Mr. Higgins, that's not proper language for one counsel to use to another," said Judge Bond. "There is no call for any hard feeling."

Higgins interrupted Judge Bond several times and finally got opportunity to say, "I was going on to say—"

"Well, don't go on," said Judge Bond. "You've said too much already."

Widow Tells Story of How She First Met Clarence F. Glover.

"I didn't say he was lying," said Mr. Higgins.

"You said so in effect," said Judge Bond. "What you said was that it wasn't true and that he knew that it wasn't. You have said too much already."

"Will the court allow the Commonwealth to make a statement? Let me tell the court that—"

"I have been around the court-house long enough to know how to run a trial. The question may be allowed."

Attorney Johnson then said: "I will ask Mr. Tupper to leave the court room as I shall summon him as a witness."

"He is not here," someone said.

Another Lawyer Excluded.

"I include Mr. Beatty and Mr. Linnell of the same office," said Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Linnell arose from within the bar enclosure and said: "My office is at No. 6 Beacon street. Mr. Elmore's office is at No. 60 State street." (Tupper is in the same office with Elmore.)

"No, but you were associated with Elmore in the will case and I want to have you excluded. I propose to have these lawyers as witnesses if I can't get the letter in any other way," said Johnson.

Mr. Linnell then walked out of the court room.

LYNN NIGHT AT THE BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

MUSIC LOVERS SEIZE OPPORTUNITY OFFERED BY THE AMERICAN TO-MORROW NIGHT.

Friday night will be Lynn Night at the Boston Opera House. Quick to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the BOSTON AMERICAN to hear grand opera at moderate cost and from desirable seats, fifty or more music lovers of Lynn have joined the Popular Opera Club and will attend the opera Friday.

To insure the comfort of the Opera Club members, the AMERICAN has arranged to send them to the Boston Opera House in special trolley cars and to bring them home in special cars after the performance. The special cars will leave Central square, Lynn, at 6:45 o'clock Friday evening, and will carry club members directly to the door of the opera house. At the conclusion of the opera the special cars will be waiting to convey the party back to Lynn.

Thus, the Lynn opera-goers may be assured of a comfortable ride to the opera house and home again. There will be no crowding or strap-hanging to mar the evening, as the AMERICAN has arranged for a sufficient number of cars to provide seats for all. Blocks of opera seats in the $1, $1.50 and $2 sections of the house have been reserved so that the Lynn party may be kept together. The management has placed at the disposal of the Popular Opera Club the best seats in the lower-priced divisions.

Never before, say music lovers, has a newspaper undertaken a more public spirited enterprise than this of the Popular Opera Club, which secures the lower priced seats for its readers and affords them the chance of hearing the finest singers in the world. That the offer has been promptly appreciated is evidenced by the scores of applications for membership that come from cities and towns in New England and from Boston itself.

Indorsed by Mayor Rich.

Lynn has been the first city, however, to form an Opera Club of such proportions that special cars are necessary. Therefore, Lynn will be the first city to have the distinction of having a night at the opera named after it, and this is probably the first time a city has ever been so honored. Many of the Lynn Opera Club members believe that as many as 100 people will join the club before Friday, so as to have the comfort of the special cars in their trip to and from Lynn.

Arthur Rogue, attorney, and one of the best known men in Lynn, immediately set about organizing a party of lawyers and Elks to join the party and from present indications thirty or forty lawyers and Elks will occupy one of the special cars. William H. Treen, an influential business man and member of the Elks order, was the first to join the Rogue party. He will take four or five people with him. Ten or fifteen of the young women members of the Sorosis Society will attend with the Club party.

When it was announced that the AMERICAN would obtain special cars for the Popular Opera Club members, the women of Lynn immediately became interested, for the special cars will enable women to go to the opera unescorted. They will have the protection of their fellow townsmen, and will in all probability meet friends on the cars.

Mrs. O. B. Bruce, of No. 33 Harwood street, said that her daughter and a party of friends were going to Boston in the afternoon. They were to go home early but now will remain for the opera, as they can return home on the special cars. Mrs. Bruce hopes that she may be able to attend the opera herself Friday.

Miss Everetta Penney, a music teacher, said that her pupils had become interested in the Popular Opera Club and a number of them would probably join the Friday party.

Idea Appeals to Teacher.

"It would be a splendid thing if we could have these opera parties every week," she said. "We need something of this sort. I have never known of such a fine offer as the AMERICAN makes. It is the directness of it that appeals to me."

At nearly every society and social organization in Lynn of which the members are musically inclined the subject of the Popular Opera Club has been discussed. Many of the members of these organizations say they will be with the party on Friday.

When Mayor Rich gave his endorsement of "Lynn Night" at the opera he said that the people of the city should take a civic pride in showing the people of other cities that there is as much culture and refinement, as well as many students of grand opera in Lynn as in any other city of New England.

"This plan of the AMERICAN'S to give it's readers a chance to hear grand opera from the lower priced seats is a grand and laudable one. I earnestly hope that Lynn will turn out en masse Friday night to attend the opera.

"There is one point that I think attention should be called to. That is this: People have always thought that to go to the opera meant the expenditure of considerable money, whereas, as the AMERICAN is now pointing out, the best seats at the opera are those that can be purchased for from $1 to $2.

"The man and woman of moderate salary has also remained away form the opera because he or she felt that it would be necessary to wear evening clothes. This misconception has been caused by the newspaper accounts of society people who attend the opera and descriptions of the gorgeous gowns and expensive jewelry they wore.

"True music lovers who occupy the lower priced seats do not wear evening clothes and expensive jewelry. They go to the opera to hear wonderful singing and music, not to dress up. And they have found that they can get the 'best appreciation of the opera,' as Nordica says, from the seats in the balcony. The increased distance from the stage tends to soften the tones of the singers and to blend into exquisite harmony the voices of the singers and the music of the orchestra."

William P. Connery said that it was a great disappointment to him not to be able to join the Lynn opera party Friday. He had an engagement which will keep him at Lynn. In speaking of "Lynn night," he said:

"I cannot say enough in praise of the AMERICAN for giving this opportunity to its readers. Music is uplifting, and this season of grand opera is one of the finest ever given in Boston, or any other part of the country. To give music lovers who cannot afford to pay the price of the higher priced seats and the added expense of a trip to Boston, this opportunity is a gain all along the line."

Remember Prize Offer.

Club members should also remember that here is a prize of $10 offered by this newspaper for the member who writes the best 300-word appreciation of the opera as viewed from the lower priced seats. This article must be in the AMERICAN office within twenty-four hours after the performance.

The Lynn Club members have selected an auspicious night to hear the opera, for the program is a fine one indeed. Alice Nielsen will be heard in "L'Enfant Prodigue." Lassalle and Blanchart are also in the cast. "L'Enfant Prodigue" will be followed by the second tableau from the opera "Der Geizige Ritter," to be sung in Russian, and there will also be given "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni's famous opera. Music lovers could ask no more for one night's enjoyment.

Applications for membership in the Popular Opera Club should be addressed to Manager, Popular Opera Club, P. O. Box 5242, Boston. When it is desired that tickets be mailed, the applicant should enclose a check, money order or cash to cover the number of tickets required. No fee is charged to join the club.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING COUPON.

Cut out the coupon, fill in the blank spaces and mail it to the address below. Enclose a stamped envelope with your address, including street and number, plainly written. Any number of seats may be ordered with a single coupon. The full amount of money should be enclosed for all the seats. In order to make certain of getting the best selection of seats it will be necessary to mail the order for seats as early as possible before the date of the opera selected. Orders will be filled in the order of their receipt. It will be possible to obtain seats by mail up to within two days of the performance. Later than this seats should be secured at the box office of the opera house.

POPULAR PRICED SEATS ENJOYED BY WELL-KNOWN FOLK

Prima donnas, who know all there is to opera houses, the Mayor of Boston, Jacques Futrelle, the noted novelist, and others who have viewed the performances at the Boston Opera House, all testify that the "popular priced" seats are as enjoyable as any in the house.

Here is what they say:

By Alice Nielsen, Prima Donna, Boston Opera House:

I get so tired with frequent rehearsals that I cannot spend a long time at my toilet getting ready to attend the opera on nights when I do not sing. I just run into the first or second balcony, where a plain street dress can be worn without attracting attention, and just surrender myself to enjoyment. This is the ideal location for a critical scrutiny of the performance. Defects that are unnoticed in the orchestra are evident here, and the acoustics are absolutely perfect.

By Lillian Nordica, Prima Donna, Boston Opera House:

This is the ideal place from which to witness the opera. I always find a balcony seat when I wish to witness a performance, and in the Boston Opera House the balconies are perfect. Nowhere in the world can one hear and see as well from the low priced seats as in this opera house, while the chairs provided for the patrons represent the latest and most intelligent arrangement for comfort. It is absolutely delightful. You may see me here whenever I have an opportunity to hear an opera.

By Mayor John F. Fitzgerald:

I sat in the low priced seats at the opera Monday night with my wife and daughter, and spent one of the most enjoyable evenings in many months. Our view of the stage was less obstructed than from my subscription seats, and I am satisfied that music tones can be heard with greater distinctness in the upper part of the house. The people who sat around us were all music lovers, and splendid specimens of Boston men and women.

By Jacques Futrelle, well known Novelist:

Dollar opera is no longer a chimera. Boston has it. I witnessed a performance from the one dollar seats and enjoyed myself thoroughly. My seat was just as comfortable as the seat in the orchestra for which a friend of mine had paid $5. I could see as well, or better, because he'd have to screw his head around an elaborate coiffure now and then. I could hear perfectly. I doubt if there is another spot in the big opera house where one can hear to the same advantage as in that top balcony.

TO REALLY ENJOY OPERA PICK OUT A DOLLAR SEAT

By CARL ADAMS.

Having heard about Dollar Opera from Mr. Jacques Futrelle—probably because Mr. Futrelle is now the possessor of one of them suits and thinks as little of the price of a pair of $5 seats as you or I would think of dropping in on the moving pictures—and also having heard from His Honor the Mayor, who qualified as an expert at the aviation meet in Squantum, the mayor sent me up to the Opera House last night to find out what I think about it. It was about time.

I want to say that it is all right. I am going again. I intend to become a regular.

Mr. Futrelle studied the dollar seats as a visitor from below. Mr. Fitzgerald went up as the Little Father of the People. They sent me up, I presume, as an authority on balconies. I do like the balconies.

They don't seem to have any gallery in a real opera house. There's just the first balcony, and then the second balcony, and then you're done.

Nobody suggested a line for my story, and I don't know what to tell you. I found the opera house, and I found the second gallery, and "Raffles" found my seat for me.

"Raffles" isn't the young gentleman's name, of course, but I didn't get his name and for one night he has got to be "Raffles."

"Raffles" is the second balcony head usher. I call him "Raffles" because when I landed they had been singing "Madame Butterfly" for some time and the house was "dark."

Just when I was beginning to think I had climbed up on the wrong night somebody came out of the darkness and flashed one of those electric lamps in my face.

It took me completely by surprise.

"What have you got?" said a gentlemanly voice, quite like K. Bellew's.

"Let's see," said I, "I've got a watch, a $20 pin, two shares of oil stock and $5, but on the level, old man, my landlady ought to have the five."

Nobody Recalled Futrelle.

"Sh!" said the young man in evening togs, "not so loud! Where's your seat check?"

So I gave it to him. I was glad the house was dark. The second balcony folks couldn't see my blushes. But of course if it wasn't dark there wouldn't have been any of this bull's eye lantern stuff, and I wouldn't have been a boob.

My seat was the highest in the Opera House. I see by the papers that Mr. Jacques Futrelle claims to have been up there on Tuesday night. While I have no desire to enter into a Peary-Cook discussion with the author of "The Chase of the Golden Plate," I desire here and now to state that I found none of Mr. Futrelle's records. I do not say that he failed to make it; I merely chronicle the fact that his records, if he deposited them, had disappeared. Nobody remembered him.

I enjoyed the opera. Years ago I read in one of the magazines—I don't recall whether it was Harper's or Scribner's—John Luther Long's beautiful story of "Madame Butterfly." Some years afterward I saw a Belasco road company, in Mr. Belasco's dramatization of the story. I think the actress was Valerie Bergerie. I know "Madame Butterfly" was preceded by a one-act piece called "Naughty Anthony."

So I went out to Huntington avenue familiar with the story and ready to be delighted, charmed, electrified and informed by its musical setting.

All of this hapened. For $1 I heard Alice Nielsen, Rita Fornia, Herman Jadlowker and Ramon Blanchart. There were sundry others and a splendid chorus. Thinking of cast, and chorus, and music, and price, as is the way of we Yankees—I recalled a before-the-curtain speech of that great American, Mr. Corse Payton. "Think of it!" Corse used to say in the palmy days of the ten, twenty, thirty, "think of it! Thirty people in my company, and the best seat in the house for thirty cents! A cent an actor!"

Splendid View of Stage.

The view of the stage is superb. The settings were beautiful. All around me were young people from the music and the art schools and the colleges in this neighborhood. There were some who looked like teachers. Between the acts those nearest to me discussed the opera and the singers apparently intelligently.

But nobody told me what to write about. Truly, I found nothing remarkable about the dollar seats. I confess that if I had my choice I should, of course, prefer the $2 seats, reached from the same landing, but so much lower down that one can see Society as well as hear the Opera.

However, it has been discovered that we have dollar opera in Boston.

That's good!
Now let's all go to it.
And that will be good.

POPULAR OPERA CLUBS SPRING UP IN NEW ENGLAND

The "Pop-Ops" are the headliners today. They're popping up all over New England, and evidences of the enthusiasm aroused by the organization of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S new Popular Opera Club came in the guise of scores of letters this morning. They are still coming, for the "Pop-Ops" are on their way, and that road leads to the Boston Opera House.

The club idea was a simple one, and that is why it scored so quickly. It is all explained in the club coupon, shown in another place. From all the larger New England cities and many of the smaller ones, and from the rural districts, men and women are writing in for tickets. Through the arrangements perfected by the manager of the club, with Manager Henry Russell, the getting of the tickets has been made a straight-forward proceeding in which the members are assured of good seats at low prices.

Already, though it is only four days since the club was started, opera lovers elsewhere are planning special trips to Boston for the opera performances. Many are making up parties. Some of these will come by train, while others nearer this city will make special trolley trips. The result will be that in every way the opera goers are going to be treated to the best there is in opera.

The club is within reach of all, for there is no fee for membership, and the only money consideration is the price of the seats desired. Members become so automatically when they fill out the coupon and mail it with the enclosure of money for seats to the manager. The use of the coupon entitles the members to all the club privileges.

Through the club, the members get the low priced seats in the balcony that are just as comfortable as the orchestra and box seats. Everything on the stage can be seen from these seats and the singers can be heard with the utmost distinctness.

How to fill out the coupon is explained in the coupon itself. All you have to do is to fill it out and mail it to the Manager, Popular Opera Club, P. O. Box 5242, Boston. The manager does the rest in undertaking to get the best posible seats in the lowest priced sections of the Opera House.

Members of the club have another privilege in being permitted to enter the BOSTON AMERICAN'S contest for the $10 prize offered for the best three hundred word appreciation of every performance. Every member is eligible to compete. Letters containing the criticisms must be in the BOSTON AMERICAN office within twenty-four hours after the performance criticised. All communications must be sent to the Opera Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN.

Valuable Prescriptions That Have Cured Thousands.

Quick Cough and Cold Remedy

Don't wait to cure a cold until you have pneumonia, consumption or many of the other dreadful results. Check it in time. This is one of the best formulas known to the medical profession. "Two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine. Add these to half a pint of good whiskey and shake them well. Use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours." Smaller doses to children according to age. Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. Any one can easily mix them; but be sure to get the real Concentrated Pine. It comes in half-ounce vials packed in air-tight tin-top cases. This treatment often cures the worst cold in a day's time.

Knocks Rheumatism

This is recognized by doctors to be one of the most effective prescriptions obtainable to promptly cure rheumatism and backache. "One ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce of Toris compound. Add these to half a pint of good whiskey (or sherry wine if it is preferred). Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bed time." Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. Any one can easily mix them. The good effects of this treatment are usually felt after the first few doses.

To Cure Indigestion

A well known physician gives the formula for a wonderful digestion mixture, which quickly relieves distress after eating, headaches, belching, sour stomach, dizziness, etc., and if used for sufficient time will completely cure the worst case of dyspepsia.

"Two ounces essence of Pepsin; three ounces syrup of Ginger; one ounce Catandir compound. These to be mixed in a six-ounce bottle, shaken well and used in doses of from one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime."

The Catandir is a comparatively recent preparation and may not be kept in stock by some of the smaller druggists, but he can get it very promptly from his wholesale house. This mixture is not expensive and is surely worth trying by any one with stomach trouble. In hospital work it has been very successful.

For a Youthful Complexion

The following prescription is contributed as being one of the most remarkable known for bringing back the rosy tint of youth to the skin: Two ounces Rose Water, one ounce Spirits of Cologne (or pure grain alcohol), four ounces Saxolite. Put the Saxolite into a pint of hot water (not boiling) and when dissolved and cooled add the Rose Water and Spirits of Cologne (or alcohol) and strain through a fine cloth. Any large bottle will serve as a receptacle if it can be closed air tight.

Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will get them in a few hours from his wholesale house. They are easily mixed at home. This preparation should be applied once a day after washing. It is said the results become apparent after the first few applications, but the treatment should be continued until the rose tint complexion be permanent.

One Effect of Automobiling.

It is now generally recognized that more men and women are becoming bald today than ever before, and the cause is automobiling. They stir up a terrible lot of dust, and in this dust are all sorts of microbes and germs. These settle upon the hair and take lodgment in the scalp, thus setting up a diseased condition that works its way down to the hair roots. Then the hair begins to fall out. There is only one remedy, and that is frequent washing with Birt's Head Wash. Ordinary soaps and shampoos are positively injurious, because they contain an excess of alkali, and alkali has a deadly effect on the hair. Birt's Head Wash is made of neutral soap, scientifically combined with Glycerin, White of Eggs, Cocoanut Oil and a small quantity of Salicylic Acid, to destroy germs and remove disagreeable odors. Sold by drug and department stores, 25c. a tube, jars 50c.

35,000 TUBERCULOSIS VICTIMS IN BAY STATE

More activity in the fight by the State against tuberculosis is urged by the special commission appointed by the Legislature to report a system for caring for tubercular patients by the State and local authorities. There is a diffrence of opinion as to certain details and on several points a majority and minority report was submitted.

The commission reports that there are 35,000 well-developed cases of tuberculosis in Massachusetts while there is provision for only 2,773 cases in hospitals and sanitariums.

The immediate addition of from 5,000 to 6,000 beds for white plague victims in these institutions is urged and that local provision for the care of advanced cases should be made at once.

The majority report makes the following recommendations: A State subsidy of $5 per week for each non-paying patient in a local hospital, which meets with the approval of the trustees of hospitals for consumptives, provided tubercle bacilli are demonstrated.

A State hospital school for children of school age with pulmonary tuberculosis, in connection with the hospital school at Canton.

SEVERED HEART LIVES A WEEK

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—"At the Rockefeller Institute they cut off a leg, put it in cold storage for a week and then sew it on again, and it knits and heals and feels and is alive, just like any other living limb! I believe that the time is not far distant when they will be able to put a man in cold storage for six months or so and then warm him up and discharge him from the hospital alive and kicking.

"Why, the other day they took a dog's heart out and put dog and heart in cold storage; left 'em in there for a week. To-day that dog is running around the laboratory. Saw him myself. His heart is back in place and he feels chipper and fine."

These words of Thomas A. Edison gave the first inkling to-day of the surgical marvels that are daily being performed upon the heart by Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the John D. Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Dr. Carrel, who first demonstrated that human tissues could be kept alive outside the body, is regarded by his fellow-physicians with as much awe as botanists look upon Luther Burbank. He has been given every facility for his unique and daring experiments at the Institute by Dr. Simon Flexner and others of the board of directors, who include Dr. L. Emmett Holt; Dr. T. Mitchell Prudden, Dr. William H. Welch, Dr. Christian A. Herter, Dr. Theobald Smith and Dr. Herman M. Briggs.

How Wonders Are Done.

"Mr. Edison was too kind," said Dr. Carrel, when the "wizard's" words were repeated to him by a reporter. Then he modestly refused to discuss his recent experiments.

From other official sources, however, the American learned of the details of Dr. Carrel's experiments.

"Dr. Carrel has actually succeeded in removing the hearts of dogs, grafting upon the hearts and replacing the hearts without seeming discomfort in a great many cases," said the American's informant. "A dog, the ascending aorta of which had been incised and sutured by Jaboulay stitches, died two and a half months after the operation. It was found, however, that the wound had healed perfectly and the scar was small. On three other dogs the descending aorta had been severed transversely and united again by continuous through-and-through sutures.

"One of these dogs was chloroformed two and a half months after the operation and was in perfect condition. The other two dogs are still living and have suffered absolutely no ill effects.

"In another novel experiment, a piece of jugular vein, which had been preserved in cold storage, was used to replace a bit of the upper part of the descending aorti of a dog. The operation lasted twenty-four minutes, and during this time the blood reached the lower part of the aorta through a parafined tube.

Dog Lived Twelve Days.

"The dog remained in good health for twelve days after the operation. His death was due to a slight slip in the technique of preserving the piece of jugular vein in cold storage.

"In another experiment, a segment of jugular vein about three centimetres in length was transplanted on the descending aorta of a small dog. The animal is still in excellent health, and there is no modification of the femoral pulse.

"The exact method by which Dr. Carrel keeps the heart and body of a dog alive and separated from each other will be made public some day. Although the work is still in its infancy, Dr. Carroll has advanced marvellously. He has conclusively showon that positive results can be obtained in plastic operations upon the thoracid aorta. But, in order to make the experiment safe enough to test it upon a human being, the technique of the diversion of the blood must be improved.

"Dr. Carrel has shown, however, beyond shadow of a doubt that cardiotomy (cutting into the heart), followed by suture with large silk thread, does not present any danger. The opening of the heart, the introduction of the finger into the cavity, even the removal of the heart from the body, does not interfere under this treatment with the health of the animal.

Prospect of Banishing Heart Trouble.

"Dr. Carrel tried to develop an operation which could be used in certain cases of mitral insufficiency. This is when the mitral valve between the heart auricle and the left ventricle does not properly close the aperture. The operation consists in producing a slight constriction of the upper part of the left ventricle. It can be obtained by a partial cuneform resection of the wall of the ventricle just below the coronary artery. A dog who underwent this operation a few weeks ago is still in good health.

"These experiments represent, perhaps, the first steps toward the complete plastic surgery of the heart and aorta. It is very probable that all diseases of these organs can be cured when a few minor difficulties are overcome."

Dr. Carrell pumps air into animals upon the hearts of which he is experimenting by passing a tube down the windpipe. The animal is well anaesthetized, and the tube is pushed down to the branching of the bronchi. By an ingenious arrangement this tube is connected with a T-shaped tube and then indirectly with a bellows and a bottle containing ether. Air can be pumped in at will and further administration of ether can be regulated.

LION LOOSE IN GALE KILLS A SAILOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The horror of an hour at sea, when in a storm that beat their vessel until it seemed each plunge must be her last, a lion broke from its cage on deck, killed a seaman and took charge until it was driven into the sea by a fusillade of revolver bullets, still lived with the crew of a German freight steamship, the Berkenfels, as the vessel lay at quarantine with her decks in order and her spars and houses shining with soap and paint.

NORTH CAROLINA GOVERNOR SAID TO SOUTH—WELL, READ:

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 1.—Governor Martin F. Ansel of South Carolina and Governor W. W. Kitchen of North Carolina met to-day and issued the following joint statement:

"It has been the legend that the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina: 'It is a long time between drinks.' No such statement was ever made. The facts as told by an eye witness of that famous meeting brands the whole story as a fabrication. This is what really happened:

"The Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina: 'Remember the fate of Montgomery?'

"'Well, who in the hell was Montgomery?' asked the Governor of South Carolina.

"'He was the man who died between drinks,' replied the Governor of North Carolina."

This official statement was posted on the bulletin board of the Seelbach Hotel, where the Governors are staying.

LEADERS ONLY CAN GET REFORM

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 1.—Stripping State Legislatures of many powers, making the Governor's office the real organ of authority, and voting for men, not measures, were advocated by Gamaliel Bradford, a Boston banker at the conference of Governors here. Unless Governors are given the right to be heard in discussion of proposed laws in the Legislatures another revolution will result, he predicted.

Bradford said such divers interests were represented in the Legislatures that intelligent actions for the State as a whole was impossible. For this reason the Governor, representing the whole State, should have more power in framing laws.

"The vital question is, what is to be done? On all hands comes the cry that we must look to the people, that the remedy lies with them in the election. It is a false scent. The people can no more reform a government than an army of privates can win a battle without officers and previous drilling and training. The old political cry was 'measures and not men.' It is the root of all our troubles. Men first and measures through them is the true slogan. In the great current of modern democracy leaders are the first thing wanted and the rule of Legislatures has almost banished the word."

Governor Draper presided at the meeting.

SCHOONER LAVENDER WRECKED ON LEDGES

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 1.—A dispatch to the agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department states that the schooner Lavender, from St. Johns, N. F., while attempting to enter North Sydney harbor, ran on Petrie's ledges and will be a total loss. The vessel is full of water. She registered seventy tons and was bound for a cargo of coal.

TEACHER'S BILL SIGNED.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Dec. 1.—Governor Mead has signed the bill providing for training courses for teachers in high schools and academies. This practically completes the overthrow of the normal school system in Vermont.

GIRL CAPTURES RUNAWAY HORSE

GLOUCESTER, Dec. 1.—Ethel Bradstreet saved Gloucester's only police patrol wagon from destruction when, mounted on her own horse, she overtook Black Joe, who, forgetting the years he has been the equine example of dignity and repose in the department, ran away.

While waiting for officers to make an arrest, Driver Allen halted the police wagon and Black Joe on Magnolia avenue, about six feet away from the railroad track. Black Joe was always regarded as a horse that would stand without hitching. A Gloucester bound train, coming around the curve at that particular moment, caused Black Joe to run. Allen wasn't long in tumbling to what had happened. He fell clear of the wheels.

Black Joe went down Magnolia street, toward Essex, faster than he was ever seen to go before. He went by Miss Bradford's house like Maud S. Miss Bradford was in the doorway. She saddled her horse and, riding astride, took up the pursuit. Handicapped though he was by the police wagon, Black Joe managed to stick it out for two miles before he was captured.

Miss Bradford got the reins and then brought him to a walk. She took the seat and drove him to the pumping station, to the amazement of more than one party of automobilists she passed on the road.

Allen, who wasn't seriously injured, took the reins there and Black Joe took the patrol wagon and contents back to Gloucester.

SEEK $10,000 FOR CRITTENDON HOME

An active campaign to raise $10,000 to cancel the indebtedness of the Florence Crittendon Home of Compassion was begun to-day by a committee of clergymen interested in the welfare of the institution. The home extends a helping hand to all unfortunate and homeless women and since its establishment has cared for over 1,000 women at a time when encouragement and assistance have meant much for their future happiness and prosperity. Rev. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church, is chairman of the committee which has undertaken to raise the fund. He is being assisted by the Rev. Cortland Myers, W. H. Van Allen, O. P. Gifford, W. T. Beale, Frederick E. Heath, S. D. Towne, C. C. Parsons and J. S. Durkee. A Maternity House is maintained at Watertown and this adjunct has been no small factor in making the work of the institution a noteworthy success. In the circular the committee says: "This work is worthy. Investigate and you will give. Are there not in this great city men and women who will give one hundred, five hundred, or one thousand dollars each, and many who will give lesser sums as a Christmas or New Year's gift to this noble cause. Success in this ten thousand dollar campaign is vitally important."

The Commonwealth Trust Company will receive subscriptions for this fund, or checks may be sent direct to the treasurer, Rev. O. P. Gifford, 514 Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass.

PERKINS, KITE MAN TAKES 100-FOOT DROP

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 1.—Samuel F. Perkins dropped 125 feet here while being supported in the air by a string of kites. The top kite collapsed in a sixty-mile gale and Perkins was only saved from serious injury by the parachute effect of the smaller kites. He had risen 150 feet despite unfavorable weather conditions when the braces of the big kites crumpled and he fell to within twenty-five feet of the earth. The rest of his descent was checked, and he was not badly injured.

SHOOTS TO SAVE BROTHER; KILLS HIM

MONTREAL, Dec. 1—In a desperate effort to protect his brother, Fred Drexel Rodgers of Philadelphia, from the charge of a wounded bull moose, W. T. Rodgers fired several shots from his rifle, one of which killed the young man. Mr. Rodgers, grief-stricken over the accident, passed through here en route to their home in Philadelphia. The fatal shooting occurred on the shore of Coulonge Lake.

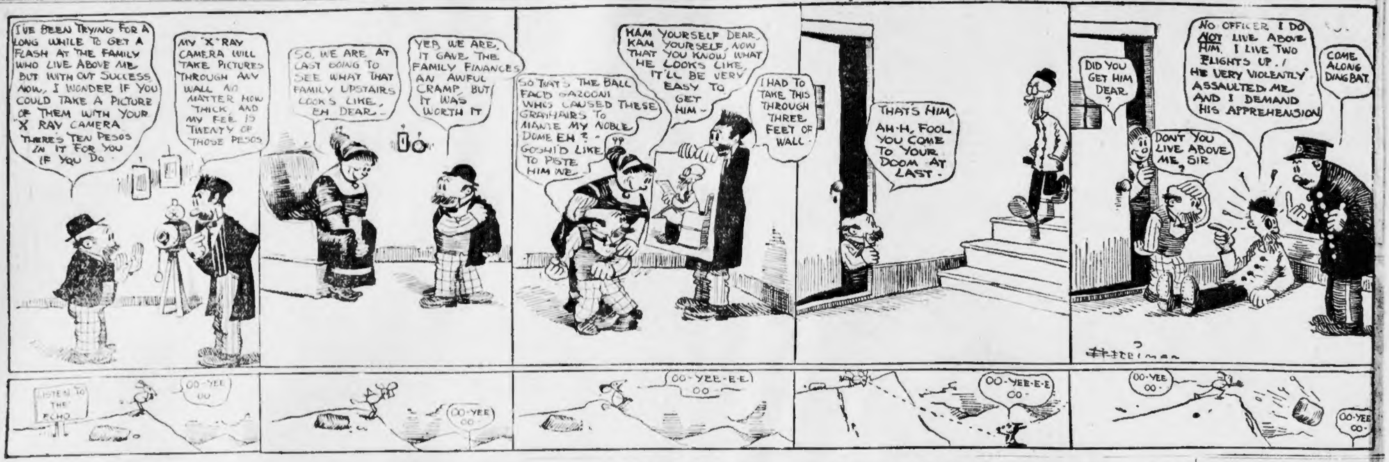
The Family Upstairs--Dingbat Pays 20 Bucks to Find Out What They Look Like--By Herriman



I'VE BEEN TRYING FOR A LONG WHILE TO GET A FLASH AT THE FAMILY WHO LIVE ABOVE ME BUT WITH OUT SUCCESS NOW, I WONDER IF YOU COULD TAKE A PICTURE OF THEM WITH YOUR "X RAY CAMERA THERE'S TEN PESOS IN IT FOR YOU IF YOU DO -
MY "X" RAY CAMERA WILL TAKE PICTURES THROUGH ANY WALL NO MATTER HOW THICK, AND MY FEE IS TWENTY OF THOSE PESOS
SO, WE ARE AT LAST GOING TO SEE WHAT THAT FAMILY UPSTAIRS LOOKS LIKE, EH DEAR -
YES WE ARE, IT GAVE THE FAMILY FINANCES AN AWFUL CRAMP BUT IT WAS WORTH IT
SO THAT'S THE BALL FACED GAZOONI WHO CAUSED THESE GRAYHAIRS TO MANTLE MY NOBLE DOME EH ? - GOSH I'D LIKE TO PASTE HIM ONE -
KAM YOURSELF DEAR, KAM YOURSELF, NOW THAT YOU KNOW WHAT HE LOOKS LIKE, IT'LL BE VERY EASY TO GET HIM -
I HAD TO TAKE THIS THROUGH THREE FEET OF WALL -
THAT'S HIM, AH-H, FOOL YOU COME TO YOUR DOOM AT LAST -
DID YOU GET HIM DEAR ?
NO OFFICER I DO NOT LIVE ABOVE HIM. I LIVE TWO FLIGHTS UP. / HE VERY VIOLENTLY ASSAULTED ME AND I DEMAND HIS APPREHENSION
COME ALONG DINGBAT

GOOD BILLS AT HUB PLAYHOUSES

"Katie-Did," the new musical play at the Boston Theatre, is already on the safe side of success.

Mabel Barrison and "Lulu's Husbands" are making things merry at the Globe Theatre.

Blanche Ring is singing herself to success in "The Yankee Girl" at the Majestic Theatre.

The Sothern-Marlowe engagement at the Shubert Theatre will end with Saturday's performances, and Forbes-Robertson will move in into that house on Monday with "The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

Francis Wilson is making the most of his opportunities in "The Bachelor's Baby" at the Hollis.

Fannie Ward heads a long list of attractive features at B. F. Keith's Theatre.

"The Lion and the Mouse," at the Castle Square Theatre will be followed next Monday by "Twelfth Night."

Montgomery and Stone continue to please large audiences at the Colonial with "The Old Town."

"The Fortune Hunter" is on its last week at the Tremont Theatre. "The Spring Maid" will come to that house next Monday.

"Seven Days" has not yet lost its place as the big laugh-maker of the town, and the Park Theatre continues to draw big audiences.

Pictures and vaudeville make up the bill at Loew's Orpheum Theatre.

Irwin's "Big Show" is the attraction at the Gaiety Theatre.

"The Vanity Fair" burlesquers are stirring up the dead ones at Waldron's Casino Theatre.

Vaudeville and pictures may be found at the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Wise Guy" company is at the Columbia Theatre.

"A Minister's Sweetheart" will finish the week at the Grand Opera House, to be followed next Monday by "The Cowboy and the Thief."

"SWAT THE FLIES, BUT PUT COVER ON THE BARREL."

You may get a hundred men higher up, but as long as there are million-dollar franchises to be bought for fifty thousand dollars, the men will be found to buy them. Swat the flies, I say, but for heaven's sake put the cover on the barrel.—Joseph Lee at Economic Club banquet.

PRAISE SCOTS AT BANQUET BOARD

The praises of "Bonnie Scotland" were sung by the several hundred members of the Scots' Charitable Society, at the 253rd annual banquet of the society at Young's Hotel. The affair was in observance of St. Andrew's Day, which is recognized and accepted as a day of celebration wherever the Scotchman dwells. President Robert Pirie was toastmaster and Alexander McGregor was chairman of the reception committee. Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham responded to the toast of "Our State." Mayor Fitzgerald responded for the city and spoke words of praise for the Scots. The Rev. A. F. McGregor, D. D., of Ontario responded to a toast, "Scottish Fibre Interwoven in the West." A letter from Andrew Carnegie was received with applause. He expressed regret at his inability to attend.

Mayor Fitzgerald paid a compliment to Alexander McGregor, and said Boston was better in every way for the presence of men like him.

SOCIETY AIDS LINCOLN HOUSE

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

The holiday spirit is already in the air, and all the world of fashion is busy making ready for the many events of the Yuletide season. Charity is not overlooked in the mad rush, however, and bazaar follows bazaar in brilliant, kaleidoscopic succession, and each seems to outdo the last in original dash and splendor. The fair today in aid of Lincoln House, held at Copley Hall, is one of the most brilliant of the year and the tableaux this afternoon and evening are the strongest of drawing cards. This evening some of the smartest members of the exclusive set are to pose, while the tableaux this afternoon are especially for the children.

The Animal Rescue League fair, to be held in Copley Hall on Monday and Tuesday of the coming week, is also to be among the leading charity affairs of the year, and members of the fashionable world are busy already in its behalf.

One of the most attractive tables will be that devoted to the children, under the charge of Mrs. Everett Morse, assisted by Mrs. James J. Storrow, Mrs. Handasyde Cabot, Mrs. Sidney Homer, Mrs. John Abbott, Mrs. Dallinger Barney and Mrs. Arthur Childs. There will be any amount of Christmas gifts of all kinds, including novel toys and books. At the candy table will be Miss Margaret Shaw and Miss Helen Gilbert of Milton; at the cake table, Miss Rosamond Lang, Mrs. Horace Stanton, Miss Marie Hastings, Miss Edith Sears, Miss Charlotte Jones and Miss Carmelita Shreve will serve. At the flower table will be Miss Dorothy Dutton, Miss Mildred Bradley, Miss Eleanor T. Gillett and Miss Joyce Windram. The household table is to be in charge of Miss Elizabeth W. Storer, Miss Helen L. Storer, Miss Anna Glidden, Mrs. C. F. Aldrich and Mrs. Charles H. Fiske, Jr. At the cafe will be Mrs. Robert Bolt. On Monday and Tuesday tea and chocolate will be poured by Mrs. Mary F. Blake, Miss Martha C. Codman, Mrs. Hinckley, Mrs. Daniel Staniford and others.

◆ ◆ ◆

The cafe is to be a la carte. At the Brookline table will be Mrs. Aaron H. Latham, Miss Mary H. Russell, Mrs. Thacher Loring, Mrs. Thomas Aspinwall, Miss Annie E. Nelson and Mrs. Horace Soule. At the Dedham table, Miss Katharine Fote; the Jamaica Plain table, Miss Margaret Morse and Miss Frances Goodwin; at the Newton, Miss Isabel Young, Mrs. Theodore Plimpton, Mrs. Sheldon, Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Merrill, Miss Bacall, Miss Johnson and Miss Plimpton. The Boston Cat Club table will be in charge of Mrs. J. L. Bryne, Mrs. Philip Greely and Mrs. G. B. Brayton. The ladies of this table are preparing special articles which will be most acceptable for owners of both dogs and cats. Another beautiful and valuable doll will be sold at this table, furnished by Mrs. Bryne. At the table of foreign articles will be Miss Olive W. Peabody. At the directors' table, Mrs. Huntington Smith, Miss Helen Willard, Mrs. Arthur T. Cabot and Miss Martha C. Codman. Contributions for special tables may be sent to No. 51 Carver street, marked for the table they were intended for. General contributions can be sent to Mrs. Huntington Smith, at the same address.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph L. Agassiz have returned from their Hamilton estate and are settled for the season at their town house, in Commonwealth avenue. Mr. and Mrs. George S. Mandell came into town from their Summer home, on Hospital Point, Beverly, Tuesday.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Storrow are to entertain Mr. and Mrs. David Mannors at their Beacon street home when those artists come to Boston, early this month, to give a series of recitals.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frost Greeley, upon their return from their hunting trip in Maine, will be at the Hotel Victoria for the Winter.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mrs. T. B. Williams and her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. George G. Sears, have returned from their Summer home, at Beach Island, Cohasset, to their town residence in Beacon street.

◆ ◆ ◆

Miss Mary P. Russell of Beacon street is to have as her guests during March her nieces, Lady Playfair (Mrs. Robert Crooks), formerly Miss Edith Russell of this city, and her sister, Mrs. Fitzgerald of England.

SAMPLE RUGS

Last ones of a pattern, some shopworn, some subject to slight mill imperfections, some that have seen service. We must have the room occupied by these rugs for the display of new patterns now arrived. A glance at following list shows that all the popular weaves are represented, and the question of profit has been entirely ignored.

Only one rug of a pattern; the earlier customers will have the better selection.

NORTH END HAS A FIRE SCARE

More than a score of families living in Stillman place, North End, received a scare early to-day when fire was discovered bursting from the stock room windows of the E. P. Sanderson Company, dealers in wheels and carriage trimmings, on the first floor of the six story brick building at Nos. 55 to 59 Washington street North.

The rear of the building fronts on Stillman place. The blaze caused a damage of $1,000 and for a time threatened to sweep a row of thickly populated tenement houses on the opposite side of the place. Stillman place is a narrow street running between Cooper and Stillman streets. The occupants of the tenement houses were awakened by the arrival of the fire apparatus to find the flames leaping across the place almost to their windows.

The firemen found great difficulty in fighting the fire owing to the immense amount of stock stored in the building. Several times the blaze threatened to get beyond control and the firemen risked their lives among falling piles of sheet iron to keep the flames from spreading.

The E. P. Sanderson Company occupied the first two floors of the building, the third floor is occupied by the National Can Company and the three upper floors by the Holmes & Blanchard Company. William H. Field & Company, manufacturers of wood working machinery, also occupied a section of the first floor.

Ladderman Stephen King of Ladder 8 was caught in a shower of broken glass and received a severe cut on his right hand. He was taken to the Relief Hospital where his injuries were treated. Several other firemen were cut about the hands and face by the sheet iron but none of the injuries was serious. It is believed the fire was caused by rats and matches.

MAY IRWIN'S LATEST SHOW. You will get the brightest lines from it in the Great City Life Section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

THREE TAKEN DOWN LADDERS AT FIRE

Walter H. Packard, wife and four-year-old son, trapped by fire on the top floor of the building at No. 5 Haverhill street today, were rescued by firemen who took them down ladders to the street. Packard is a tinsmith and uses the top story of the building, a three-story wooden structure, as an apartment and shop. On the first floor are the warerooms of the Trescott Boat Company and on the second that of J. W. Taylor & Co., heat and ventilating apparatus manufacturers. Packard led his wife and boy, Walter, Jr., to the stairway in an effort to reach the street only to find that the stairway from the second to the third floor had been burned away. The loss was $1,000.

DECLARES HUSBAND TRIED TO POISON HER

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Dec. 1.—Mrs. William Tuttle of Plymouth, who is suing her husband for divorce, created a sensation in the Superior Court when she told Judge Reed that her husband had repeatedly tried to poison her. Mrs. Tuttle told Judge Reed that her husband on one occasion put poison in the soup. She tasted it and refused to eat it, and then gave it to a dog, which was killed by the soup in twenty minutes. Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle separated in 1907. They have a son eighteen years of age. Mr. Tuttle is a man of means, and Mrs. Tuttle is suing for alimony as well as for divorce.

BILLIARD STARS CLASH TONIGHT

By ED. COGSWELL

[illegible]

[illegible] perfecting their game.

News comes from John McAuliffe, manager of Morningstar and Schaefer, that Fred Eames has sold out his interests in the billiard room in Denver. This may mean that Fred will give his old home friends in Boston a visit before next Spring.

[illegible] championship again can not be learned. He won the title about a year ago in New York, only to lose it shortly after.

There are a lot of sharks [illegible] the Mystic Valley League this Winter, but all are taking off their hats to Hall [illegible] to Malden. He [illegible] [illegible] his opponents in [illegible] it is the opinion that he goes through the season without a defeat being chalked [illegible]

[illegible] that in the drawing for the [illegible] between the [illegible] ley Barker of the Highlands [illegible] there is anybody with a chance of lowering the colors of Hall it is estimated by experts that Barker is the chap. At any rate [illegible] very pretty [illegible]

When [illegible] George Slosson begin their match [illegible] balkline championship [illegible] New York. With the high speed Hoppe is going it seems impossible that Slosson has a chance in getting the title away from the youthful phenomenal cue artist. The match is for 1000 points, of which 500 will be [illegible] conclude Friday night. Bert Mains, manager of Hoppe, predicts that Slosson will be beaten by 300 points.

Lucas Hall is certainly trying to hog the whole thing in the Amateur Boston Pin League [illegible] way that he is going just now. He leads in single string with 158, three strings with 376 and high average with 10[illegible]. This is carrying things along with a vengeance, but who is going to stop him?

TUFTS COLLEGE MAY ABANDON FOOTBALL

Tufts may drop football for a year or two at least. At this week's meeting of the Athletic Advisory Board it will be decided whether or not to abolish the game from the list of varsity sports. The reason assigned is a financial one entirely, the heavy money losses sustained by the teams in the past few years being the cause.

The committee which will act on the matter consists of Professor Harry G. Chase, chairman; Professor Edwin H. Rock[illegible] Instructor Alexander Dillingham, Thomas Knight, '03; F. G. Hap[illegible] of [illegible] H. C. Foss, '94; Clifford M. Ansden, '11, of South Boston; George L. H[illegible] '11, of Somerville, and Robert M. Lowe, '12, of Rochester.

"There is more than idle gossip in these reports," said Professor Henry G. Chase, the athletic adviser to-day. [illegible] the game at Tufts [illegible] has been unsuccessful in a [illegible] due to the lack of strong [illegible] support.

BOSTON HORSES TO RACE AT MONTREAL

Fank Fox of Combination Park, Medford, and other local horsemen have been invited to compete in the annual ice races at Montreal which are scheduled to begin at Delormier Park, January 9-25 inclusive, and for which purses of $4,000 are offered.

The classes as arranged are for the free-for-all pacers with The Fe[illegible] 2.02¼, [illegible] 2.12, 2.18, 2.22, 2.25 and 2.35 [illegible] and free for all trot, 2.19, 2.24 and 2.35 trot. There will also be an open two-[illegible] best two in three heats, and a [illegible] dash upon the ice.

All the races will be mile heats, best [illegible] in five to a finish, and pools will be sold each day, Ed Morse being the [illegible]

Arrangements have been made for heating the grandstand with steam, and the entry of a good sized number of New England horses is assured. Montreal is preparing to give the visiting horsemen a fine reception.

STATE TO PROSECUTE NELSON AND MORAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1.—The attorney for the San Francisco Church Federation will swear to a complaint and the District Attorney's office will prosecute Battling Nelson and Owen Moran on a charge of engaging in a prize fight here last Saturday.

The attitude of the prosecutor was made clear in a letter sent to-day by District Attorney Fickert. He suggested that the federation confer with Assistant District Attorney Lane with regard to the prosecution of the fighters and their seconds.

M'GRAW TO REPRESENT GIANTS AT BIG MEETING

By SAM CRANE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Manager McGraw has [illegible] after the National League [illegible] he goes to the [illegible] resent the New York [illegible] of [illegible]

President Lynch [illegible] the annual [illegible] of which he is the [illegible] at the Hotel Breslin on Dec. [illegible]

President Brush [illegible] he has [illegible] to leave for San Antonio, Tex., [illegible] days and [illegible] that he should select [illegible] who has just signed a five years' contract to manage his team, to represent him.

There is no doubt that McGraw is in closer touch with President Brush and the latter's policies than any other man and while the magnates might possibly look askance at the doughty manager, I am willing to wager that his ideas will be listened to and carefully considered.

The National League lawmakers possibly would have been saved lots of trouble in the past had they had a practical base-ball man like McGraw to advise them in their long drawn out conclaves.

McGraw, if he does go to the meeting as a delegate of the New York Club, will vote for Thomas Lynch as the next president of the National League under instructions from President Brush, and for a three year term, too, if the amendment to the constitution can be passed [illegible]

McGraw can say too a few things on the umpire situation that may be most pointed and [illegible] proper.

The New York [illegible] record if Manager McGraw is given the job.

Lynch Confers With Brush.

President Lynch has had many conferences of late with Mr. Brush and there is evidently the best of understanding between them [illegible] election and Mr. Brush will [illegible] convinced before [illegible] that his plans will not miscarry.

If he was not in that frame of mind he wouldn't go.

Pat Powers has not said much about his chances of re-election to the presidency of the Eastern League [illegible] annual meeting of which organization will take place on December 12 [illegible] If Powers is not elected again [illegible] the Eastern League [illegible] make a big mistake.

If the members of that organization would only look back to its long history from the time of its inception they will find that not only was Pat Powers its founder and father, but its protector and savior at times when any other leader would have thrown up his hands in dismay.

But not so Pat Powers. He was always ready to jump into the breach, not alone with his influence but with his money, his own, too. And there have been [illegible] times in the existence of the Eastern League [illegible] Pat Powers [illegible] saved [illegible] the league intact.

Powers Drew Small Wage.

Until the last two or three years Powers was a very poorly paid president. His salary was far and away below what his services were entitled to or what its importance and prominence in base-ball circles fully warranted.

If [illegible] Pat Powers to Eastern League [illegible] as a Class A [illegible] cannot be expected.

The members of the Eastern League want to [illegible] they decide to supercede Pat Powers, the best and staunchest friend [illegible] was fortunate enough to have as its head, to use any [illegible] experimental candidate, whoever he may be.

SOX TO LET WOOD AND CARRIGAN GO

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 1.—Pitcher Wood and Backstop Carrigan are said to be of the players whom President John I. Taylor of the Boston Red Sox is willing to let go.

And that makes the visit of Hugh McBreen, the secretary of the Boston team, to Chicago a bit more important than it would otherwise have been.

It is quite possible that the secretary of the Boston Club did more than talk about the number of tons of steel and concrete in Comiskey's park when he and the Old Roman gathered in Chicago last week.

Wood and Carrigan will probably be disposed of by the Red Sox. The two, it is said, are scheduled to go at the annual meeting of the American League when all the magnates of that organization foregather in New York next month.

DARTMOUTH HAS HARD BASKETBALL SCHEDULE

HANOVER, N. H., Dec. 1.—Manager [illegible] announced today the season's schedule for the Dartmouth Basket Ball Team. Captain Mullins issued the call for candidates and a squad of thirty reported for the initial practice held at the old gymnasium today.

It is hoped that the big gym will be in shape to be used for the games. Four of last year's varsity players are back in the game and others who have [illegible] in first years have [illegible] Captain Mullins [illegible] Menset and [illegible] candidates are [illegible] Edwards and W[illegible]

RED SOX GET PLAYER WANTED BY THE CUBS

CHICAGO, Dec. [illegible] day that Pitcher Noyes, the youngster recommended [illegible] Tinker, will not [illegible] with the Cubs next year, having been already signed up by [illegible] Browns. He is now in Chicago a student in Pharmacy at Northwestern University. His name is Wynne C. Noyes [illegible] as was first reported [illegible] Boston Americans have grabbed off [illegible] player who Murphy hoped to sign in Outfielder Rickert.

CLEVELAND SIGNS MAINE BACKSTOP

ROCKLAND, Me., [illegible] Harold Ladd of Warren, who has attracted considerable attention in this part of the State as backstop of the Warren [illegible] team the past three years, has signed a contract with the Cleveland Americans.

MAINE MOOSE SEASON AT END

By DICK CARPENTER.

ESSEX COUNTY CLUB BIDS FOR GOLF MEET

The open championship of the United States Golf Association will in all probability be contested for at the Essex County Club, Manchester-by-the-Sea, next June. The Essex County Club is the only organization to ask for the event.

For the amateur championship applications have been received from the Apawamis Club of Rye, N. Y., [illegible] Cricket Club and [illegible] Country Club. There were many who thought the Deal Golf and Country Club would apply for the fixture, but up to date this application has not been received. The women's championship will in all probability be played at either the Nassau Country or the Garden City Golf Club.

Applications must be on hand by tonight, but the decision of the committee will not be made till the regular meeting of the association at Chicago January 14.

Do you realize that my shoes have been the standard for over thirty years; that I make and sell more $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the United States?

The benefits of free hides, which apply principally to sole leather, and the reduced tariff on sole leather, now enables me to give the wearer more value for his money, better and longer wearing $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than I could give him previous to the tariff revision.

Quality counts. It has made my shoes The Leaders of the World.

For Fall and Winter Wear, my immense stock includes the latest and best styles in every size and width, especially in Young Men's Lasts, and my stores also carry at all times the most complete assortment of the more substantial styles such as have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

You will be pleased when you buy my shoes because of the fit and appearance, and when it comes time for you to purchase another pair, you will be more than pleased because the last ones wore so well, and gave you so much comfort.

"But the game was brutal, just the same. Think of all them bright young fellows, as they stood there on the gridiron, ready and willing to be lifted up into the air and banged down on their skulls for the sake of Alma Mater, whoever she is. I think that a gent who will face possible death for a girl named Alma is either a hero or a fool, according to how Alma shapes up.

Wilfred as Gladiator

"Wilfred was to the game with me, and he explained all of its fine points. He showed me why all of the other players stood back with heads bowed down when one of the gladiators was being spoke soft to by a doctor and two trainers, and he explained that the only reason they laid still and silent after a mix up was because the ground was so hard from the frost that it wasn't nice and downy to light on.

"Wilfred [illegible] when he was in the [illegible] Business College, learning shorthand and typewriting, he was the right guard on the team. He says that his college had a regular college yell: 'Shorthand, Typewriting, Ha Ha Ha!' and he told me how he came out of the battle without a scratch.

"[illegible], while we wouldn't mind seeing our college youths getting their finger nails broke, we don't like to see them getting their necks broke, and so I agree with you that football is a brutal game."

"I'm going to see a boxing match to-night," said the Head Barber. "I think that boxing is a much more manly sport than football, because there is kids fighting all over the country all the year around, and you hardly ever hear of one of them getting killed. If fighting isn't a safe sport, how is it that more of them pugs ain't killed?"

"Maybe it's because them pugs makes it safe when they are doing their dialogues in the clinches," said the Manicure Lady. "Fights ain't always square, and football is."

"Being square is a great thing sometimes," replied the Head Barber, "but the guy who runs the risk of being killed for the sake of being square, is square only from his shoulders up."

THE SPEED LIMIT

THE Curbstone Club members were discussing the speed of motorcycles when the ancient carpenter, who had just come in, joined in the conversation.

"Talking about motorcycles," he said, "I took a count of them in front of my house the other evening.

"I noticed that a continual string of them seemed to be coming by the place, so I started in counting.

"By the time I had reached 987 I made a peculiar discovery. I happened to notice by a mark of the tire of the wheel that it was the same motorcycle that I had been tallying.

"The rider went so fast round and round the block that I mistook him for a parade."

The Way of the World

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

CARUSO can get for a bit of a song the price of an automobile;
I could sing the same lay and you'd answer me nay if I asked for the price of a meal.

John D. can write checks for a million apiece, and get them all cashed at the bank;
I could do the same thing, but I'd land in Sing Sing in a dungeon depressingly dank.

Henry James can write books that don't mean what they say, or anything else, but they sell;
If I wrote the same kind they'd examine my mind and have me restrained for a spell.

The corner policeman can walk on your feet, or haughtily brush you aside;
If I tried the same trick you would reach for a brick, and I'd have an ambulance ride.

John Drew can eat lunch as he sits on the stage, and your eager approval you'll shout;
I could eat the same lunch, but you'd rise in a bunch and savagely cry "Put 'im out!"

Nelse Aldrich tells statesmen to do what he says without any palpable reason;
I could do that, of course, but they'd seize me by force and order me tried for high treason.

This tale has no moral; I try to get mine; the other man tries to get his;
And although I am sore that he always gets more, it's merely the way that things is.

Don't Talk of Your Woes

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TWO women met in the corridor of a hotel.

"How do you do?" cried one. "I am so glad to see you; how are you?"

Before five minutes had passed, she wished she has left out the last clause of her greeting.

I knew she did, for I overheard the conversation, and such a string of woes and ills I have seldom listened to.

"Well, I can't say I'm very well," said the second woman and then she began:

"If that woman has all the ills she lays claim to, she ought by rights to be dead and buried."

The Interminable Tale

At first her companion showed a friendly interest, then she looked faintly bored, then she looked deadly bored.

She tried several times to escape, but just as the Ancient Mariner held the wedding guest a listener to his tale, so did the lady of the many ills hold her friend.

At last the latter broke away, and I am sure it will be many a long day ere she again asks that woman how she feels.

No doubt this woman had a good many ailments, but it would have been wiser to have kept them to herself.

One of the hardest lessons we human beings have to learn is that the world in general is not interested in our woes and ills.

There is a certain melancholy joy in relating a long list of ailments and misfortunes.

Haven't you often heard a woman exclaim with gusto, "And not only that, my dear, the worst is still to come," etc., etc.

Even though you do feel rather miserable, don't say so.

Of course, this does not apply to your own family, though even they will grow weary if the tale is repeated too often.

The Smile's Value

But do not wail to the world at large. Present a smiling face as long as you can.

Did you ever see the picture of "Smiling Joe," the little consumptive who was strapped to a board night and day for several years? He made himself famous by his sunny cheerfulness and beautiful smile.

When people ask you the conventional "How do you do?" they neither expect nor care to hear a recital of your ills.

Here is a little bit of advice: Don't talk too much about yourself, and don't be critical.

It is provincial to be critical. Those who are not used to having much are usually the most critical.

If you must talk about yourself, talk about your joys, not your woes.

Your friends will grow tired of too large a dose, even of the former, but they can stand that better than the latter.

If you really are not well, say so, but spare them the details.

In the Shops of Paris

The newest muffs are enormous.

Suede is a favorite material for belts.

Cravats of beadwork with tassels are new and odd.

Aigrettes and paradise plumes will be worn more and more.

Short, straight cut jackets and narrow skirts are the rule.

Jackets button over at the side and usually sport a sailor collar.

Irish crochet lingerie pins for the neck and belt are fashionable.

The boyish jacket must be avoided by all who are not youthful in figure.

Decidedly new are belt buckles entirely covered with close set beading.

Hats are delightfully picturesque this season no matter what their size.

In some of the elaborate gowns the overskirt is frequently cut into pieces, one crossing over the other in surplice effect.

Belts of wampum—that is Indian beads—are easily made and are unique and pretty.

Some of the cleverest touches of the toilet are found in the back of the new costumes.

The squawlike fashion of wearing tails heads and paws is discarded by well dressed women.

Gored or semi-circular styles in skirts are given the preference over cluster pleated models.

Muffs, scarfs, and turbans for school girls are made of serge or velvet borderd with fur.

Soft, curious gray coral tints are seen as well as many new colors on the deep purple, red magenta order, which lie between claret and wistaria.

Drooping plumes are to be worn upright at the side or back of high helmetlike hats, as a final maniftsiation of the Chantecler style.

The mode of hairdressing follows the Roman tendency, and headdresses of pearls, ribbon, and jewels are much worn.

White tipped black fox fur is being cut and mounted like quills, as a rival to its feathered cousins.

Silks, satins, velvets, and furs—especially sealskin—are much used for the new Winter hats and toques.

Unpretentious blouses may be smartened and brightened by a few beads carefully selected as to color.

More fashionable than the long nap or furry beaver is the one that has shorter fur and is smooth and shiny.

Tassels are utilized in all sorts of original styles in the decoration of the Winter frocks and coats for children.

New veilings show interwoven circles as large as half a dollar, and close rows of lattice work with a thick spot at each intersection.

Tailored suits are shown largely in rough materials in mannish effects. Serge and cheviot are more seen than broadcloth, except in black.

Indian shawls are now cut up and fashioned into handbags, purses, slippers, muffs—in fact, into almost every accessory of dress.

Large, black velvet, old English hats are decked to the limit in white or pale colored plumage, but not with the willow plumes.

Faded rose is a favorite color for outer garments for children this Winter. Felt hats of the same color can also be procured.

Lovely veiled effects in blouses for cloth suits, the top layer of chiffon or net usually matching the cloth, are made in all colors.

An odd skating set—turban and muff—are made of tricot; that is, knitted wools. Both the turban and muff are decorated with buttons.

One of the loveliest fabrics for dressy wear is the moire messaline, in quite new designs of waterings, shot in all kinds of chameleon colors, which used to be called pigeon's wing, blue and pink or mauve, and another tone of blue or green and violet. It is far removed from the old-fashioned silk.

Day's Best Story

JUDGE JAMES R. CATON of Virginia relates an incident that happened "down on the East Shore." He said there was a new and inexperienced justice of the peace whose first case was a man to be prosecuted for stealing a yearling calf. The case was set by the Justice for 8 o'clock one Monday morning. He opened court with great dignity. The only persons involved that were present were the sheriff, defendant and his attorney. The prosecuting attorney failed to put in an appearance. The justice called the case, whereupon the attorney for the defendant moved to dismiss because the prosecution was not ready. This put the Justice in a quandary. Finally he said:

"Do I hear a second to the motion?" The lawyer punched his client, who, being thus tipped off, said, "I second the motion."

"It has been moved and seconded," said the Justice with rare dignity, "that the case be dismissed. All in favor of this motion say aye." The prisoner and counsel voted for the affirmative. The sheriff cast the minority vote for the negative.

"This motion is carried and the culprit discharged."

Aunt Kate's Rules

(The following rules of conduct were prepared for their auntie by the lovable children in Nellie McClung's "Second Chance," recently published.)

MRS. KATE SH[illegible]STONE.

PLEASE take care of these things, and remember to do them, and much good will follow here and hereafter:

1. Keep your nerves strung.
2. Don't screech at every little noise. [illegible] help none.
3. Don't make nobody wash when they are already done so.
4. Sleep at night, snore all you want to, we don't stay awake to listen to you.
5. Don't bust yourself to think of things for us to do. We kept the woodbox [illegible] long before we ever say you, also water pail and other errings.
6. Don't make remarks on freckles. We have them and don't care, freckles is honorable. (This was Jimmy's contribution.)
7. Don't always say you won't live long, we don't mind, only Mrs. Jane Watson is picking it up now from you. We don't like it, it ain't cheerful.
8. Don't interfere about bedtime. We don't with you.
9. Don't tell about children raised in idleness and turned out bad. It ain't cheerful, and besides we're not.

THE DOUBLE CROSS

A Great American Mystery Story by Gilson Willets

Copyright, 1910, by G. W. Dillingham Company

CHAPTER XXXII.—(Continued)

"AND you yourself wish to have our contract annulled now—because you love the son of Leon Alvarado, your guardian's son?—to whom it is said you are engaged to be married. Tell me—did you look at me—like that—the times we met—just because I looked so much like—the man you love?"

Even as I asked that important question, I turned in feverish haste to the candle, stopped—and blew it out, leaving us in total darkness.

"You heard a sound, Alva?—a jingle of spurs?—out there on the corridor?"

"Yes. And the clank of swords. They passed that window, John. They saw us."

"They? You think there was more than one?"

"Yes. Two or three—cavalry officers."

"Oh, no matter, Alva. I'm sorry I put out the light. I wanted to—look at you."

"The need for the light has passed, John. You have seen—the cross."

"I want to ask you a million questions."

"No time now—for a million, John. Ask just one."

"Ah! You mean if I ask the right question—everything may be changed. Do you really love the son of Leon Alvarado, as they say you do?"

"I do." She pronounced the words with noticeable vehemence.

"And that son—is the stranger in the black mask?"

"The stranger in the black mask," she replied, "controls the destinies of all three of us, John—your own destiny, and Felipa's and mine. But now—we cannot talk here much longer. That marriage contract must be annulled. Felipa need never know of it—nor of—the double cross. I have arranged for everything. Senor Reyes, the Minister of Justice, is now in Guanajuato. And this is what you, John, must do."

The Plan

She paused. I could dimly see her white dress now, as I peered into the darkness. And I knew that, as she spoke, she was making her way toward the patio door.

"The Senor Reyes," she said, "arrived at Guanajuato this evening on the train that brought Ildefonso. The Senor Reyes will sleep to-night in my private car, Sunrise, at the station. He wishes to leave on the train that departs at daybreak in the morning for Mexico City. He has with him an application for the annulment of our contract, John—our contract of marriage. I will sign it. So must you. You must ride to the railroad to-night, and reach the car a little before daylight. There you will sign the application—and get back here before Felipa is up in the morning. She will know nothing of your absence. That is all. Now you open that door, while I open this one!"

As I opened the garden door, she cried in an excited tone:

"If you will surely board the Sunrise before daylight in the morning—the way will be cleared for your marriage with Felipa."

"Which means that I will forfeit my fortune," I said. "Very well! I will reach the Sunrise—in time. For I love—Felipa. While you, Alva, you love the son of Leon Alvarado. And so, we must annul—"

The Golden Senorita had left the room, going by the patio door, which she had closed after her.

And I fancied that I heard the bang of the door of the motor car, out in the patio.

CHAPTER XXXIII

The Duello

I SAT down to ponder the double cross.

The women of the cross! Here was the mystery of mysteries! Two women who had never met, two women wholly unlike in appearance, the one a wondrous brunette, the other a glorious blonde, eyt each bearing identically the same sign of the cross.

And I—I was betrothed to both of them.

Did I also—love—both of them? No! Nonsense! Can a man love two women at the same time? Ridiculous! I loved Felipa—only Felipa—the girl of the convent and the woman of the steamer. And Felipa loved me, of that I felt quite certain, in spite of all I knew of her inexplicable "affair" with the stranger. Had she not asked me to forgive him—everything? Well, I forgave him—because I—I didn't know why.

The stranger? Would he prove really to be the son of Leon Alvarado? If so, then here was a heart-tragedy—a tragedy of tangled lives. For Alva loved that man; she had told me so, just now, decisively and vehemently. But he—he loved Felipa; he had told me so, ardently and with fervor, that very evening. Poor Alva!

Of these two women, which was the true woman of the cross? Alva, of course. Had she not furnished abundant, overwhelming, proof that she, she alone, was the woman my father had in mind when he made his will? She was the woman named in the mariage contract. She herself had signed that contract, which was [illegible] annulled because she loved, not [illegible] her guardian's son. And she herself had come to me of her own accord and had deliberately shown me the sign of the cross, as Reyes said the woman alluded to in the will would do.

The Stranger's Sister

On the other hand, I had found on Felipa's arm a cross identical with that which Alva had just now displayed on her own arm. The will required me to marry a woman bearing such a sign. Very well, then. Felipa herself bore the sign and Felipa I would marry, even though hers was not the true cross. What? Marry Felipa—and lose my fortune? Yes! A thousand times yes! For I loved Felipa.

Thus I mused, till suddenly I heard excited voices out on the corridor—recognized Felipa's voice, and Joaquin's and the stranger's. And presently, in the stranger's voice, I heard the cry:

"Senor el Captain Ruiz! Let go of my—sister."

Yes, I heard the stranger cry this astounding command in an imperious voice ringing with authority.

Rushing out on the corridor, I was just in time to hear Joaquin snarl:

"Who commands me?"

And without waiting for answer, out shot his [illegible] the stranger's mask and tore it from his face.

Joaquin then, having thus unmasked the stranger, gave one quick glance close into his face, and cried:

"The son of Leon Alvarado!"

Just then I arrived on the scene. It was too dark to see the stranger's features plainly, unless I went close to him and peered at him as Joaquin had done; but so great was my respect for the stranger that I simply could not take advantage thus of his helplessness. Besides, as I had promised not to tear away his mask, the implication was that I would not seek in any way to discover his identity.

"And since it is you—Leon Alvarado," Joaquin added, "you probably know the use of a sword."

And with that he struck the stranger across the mouth with the mask—then drew his sword.

"At your service—here and now," promptly responded the stranger, with a calm air of utmost self-assurance.

"Lieutenant, your sword, if you please—for the Senor Alvarado," said Joaquin, turning to one of his two brother officers—(lieutenants)—who were of the group.

"On Guard!"

The lieutenant handed the stranger his sword and the unmasked man immediately drew the gleaming steel.

"Senores!" I cried, protestingly.

"Senores!" pleaded Felipa, in a horrified voice.

The four men—Joaquin and the stranger and the two lieutenants—had stepped off the corridor into the garden.

I sought to get Felipa away from the scene, dragged her almost by force into Don Justino's room and closed the door.

"Felipa," I said, taking her trembling form in my arms. "What has happened here. Tell me—quick."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

How Fat May Be Removed Rapidly By a Simple Home Remedy Without Causing Wrinkles, Disturbing the Diet or Necessity For Exercise.

"Fat is nothing but unused energy," says a prominent physician, "and the man or woman who is burdened with it can easily get rid of it if they wish. All they need is ½ ounce of Marmola, ½ ounce of Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ ounces of Peppermint Water [illegible] at any good drug store for a few cents. Then let them take one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime until they are down to the weight they want to be.

This simple home receipt is far and away better than any or all the patent or secret medicines, for it reduces the fat safely and harmlessly. The ingredients are in fact beneficial to the system, having both tonic and purifying qualities, and so help rather than distress the stomach. The remedy does not cause wrinkles, for it reduces one gradually and naturally, preserving a good outline, and, best of all, needs neither physical exercise to help it do the work, nor does it require any change in diet—one can get results and still take things easy—eating meanwhile just what, when and how he or she pleases. Be sure and get the Marmola in a sealed package, so that you get Marmola and not a substitute.

TO PROMOTE HAIR GROWTH

Mrs. F.—Yes, I think you were quite right in interesting yourself in the condition of your husband's hair, and I shall give you the best advice possible in order to help him overcome his hair troubles. The best thing I know for promoting hair growth is Crystolis, a new preparation that was recently awarded a gold medal at the Brussels International Exposition recently held in Europe. Since the discovery of Crystolis, a little over a year ago, it has been found that this valuable new drug contained marvelous properties for the treatment of the hair and scalp. In subjecting Crystolis to various tests in the worst cases of baldness, dandruff, itching scalp, etc., the results obtained by the experimenting chemist have been considered almost miraculous. In every case it was found that where there were any hair roots left it would produce a new and luxuriant growth in from four to six weeks' time. Gray or faded hair was even restored to its natural color in from ten to fourteen days. In minor cases of scalp and hair diseases, such as dandruff, falling hair, itching scalp, etc., it was found that these unnatural conditions were corrected and often completely cured by two or three applications. It has caused quite a stir among hair specialists, and there is no doubt in my mind as to its great value in growing new hair. If you want your husband to test the merits of Crystolis, I would suggest that you write the Creso Laboratories, Department 870, Scranton, Pa., and ask them for further particulars regarding Crystolis, and they will be sent you free of charge.

DR. A. F. M.—I would also advise you to write to the above firm, as dandruff or falling hair can be overcome by one or two applications of Crystolis. Any of our other readers who are bothered with scalp or hair troubles would also do well to write the above firm.

Desperate Desmond

DESMOND PUT CLAY OVER ME AND THEN LEFT ME IN THE SUN TO DIE A HORRIBLE DEATH!
GO HECTOR, GO CLARENCE AH, NOBLE BLOODHOUNDS THEY ARE ON DESMOND'S TRAIL AND ROSAMOND WILL BE SAVED!
I'VE TRACKED HIM AT LAST
YOU MONSTER, YOU CUR!
YOU DO THE "DAVY CROCKETT" ACT, MY PROUD BEAUTY
I'LL MAKE HIM THINK THE HOUNDS ARE STILL ON THE OUTSIDE
R-R-R-R-R W-W-OOOOF BOW WOW-W-W R-R-R-R-R
A PACK OF CURS. WE'LL HAVE SOME LOAD TOO!
DOG CATCHER
ROSAMOND, YOU ARE IN MY POWER!
LISTEN TO MY PLEA, SIR!
TRYING TO KID THE LAW, EH. HOP ALONG!
WOOF R-R

If the water holds out the farmer will have the clay off Claude in a few minutes, and then let Desperate Desmond beware. Our brave hero won't do a thing to that cowardly cur. But, first of all, Claude will have to find out where the villain is, and that may not be such an easy matter.

Leave it to the bloodhounds. Hector and Clarence. A classier pair of dogs never chased Eliza across the ice in an Uncle Tom's Cabin show. At that, they don't need to be so awfully clever to run Desmond to earth. You can trail him anywhere by those vile cigarettes he smokes. And they say he inhales them.

The faithful dogs have traced Desmond to his lair, and now it's up to Claude to get him. But Desmond's diabolical cunning places an unexpected obstacle in our hero's path. The dastardly dog has forced Rosamond to use her arm as a bar for the door, and Claude wouldn't hurt her for money, marbles or chalk.

Our noble young hero is some strategist himself. While Hector and Clarence are burrowing under the door, Claude works the phonograph, thus making Desmond believe that the dogs are still outside. How's that for a stunt? Don't you ever tell us again that Claude is not there with the think stuff.

Here come the dog catchers! We hope they are not going to grab Hector and Clarence before their work is done. Even if the dogs haven't got licenses, they ought to be allowed to go at large when they are on an errand of mercy like this. But you know how mean those petty officials can be sometimes.

Worse and more of it! They have arrested Claude for contempt of court, or whatever you call it when a man kids a dog catcher. In the meantime, Desmond is taking Rosamond away from there. Always that lowlife is making trouble for those two loving hearts. To-morrow it will be worse yet, maybe.

One Woman's Work

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

NOT since old Saybrook days and the stirring times of old Lion Gardiner has the State of Connecticut been so excited as it is right now, and the excitement has all been caused by one woman, the wife of a well-known New York surgeon.

Something over a year ago Mrs. Frederick S. Dennis happened to hear a lecture at Columbia University on the subject of the new agriculture, the miracles that were being worked all over the land by the scientific experimenters, and she resolved then and there to see what could be done in the agricultural miracle line around about her country home in Connecticut.

The results were amazing; and it occurred to Mrs. Dennis to make the experiment as wide as the State; so, enlisting the services of a noted agricultural expert and lecturer, she went around among the farmers teaching them the ideas, principles and methods of the new farming. She had them instructed in farm management; in the right rotation of crops; improvements of the soil; tillage and fertilizers; the selection of seed; the nature and varieties of plant food, and how to apply them; the diseases of plants, and how to remedy them; intensive farming, and how to do it. Prizes were offered to spur on the movement, and, in order that no stone might be left unturned, the resolute and thoroughly enthused woman was everywhere about the State in her auto, personally soliciting the attention of the farmers to her project.

The reward was magical! The poor old soil, exhausted by the bunglesome culture of centuries, when touched by the wand of the new science blossomed like a garden. The returns were increased two fold, and in many cases ten-fold. The soil was not dead, it was simply hungry, and, when fed and properly handled, it produced wonders. Where barrenness and desolation had lain like a pall, beauty bloomed and Plenty opened her well-filled sheaves.

Mrs. Dennis—the modern combination, in a real and substantial sense, of Ceres, Pomona, Demeter and all the other ancient goddesses of the fields—is going to keep up the good work, so handsomely begun, until the "abandoned farm" shall be a thing of the past in the Nutmeg State and the ancient commonwealth shall regain very much more than the virginal fertility and beauty that belonged to it when the white man first came to its shores.

Completely "wrapped up" in the movement, as she does not hesitate to own, Mrs. Dennis is looking for no other reward for her labors than the one she finds in "seeing things grow." And a nobler reward one could not have.

Greater than the man who "wades through slaughter to a throne" is the man, or woman, who "makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before—who does something to make the old earth laugh in the harvests that make for the gladness of the world."

Tested Recipes

PUFF PASTE BLOCK HOUSES

MAKE a good puff paste and roll it out in a thin sheet of about three-quarters of an inch in thickness. Cut into strips three inches long and half an inch wide. Bake in quick oven and form blockhouses by making squares of three pastry strips to each side, overlapping the corners (make fence fashion). Parboil and blanch one pound of sweetbreads and chop or cut into half-inch pieces. Clean and drop into small pieces, a half-pound of fresh mushrooms. A can of button mushrooms can be used instead if desired.

RICE AU GRATIN

WASH one cup of rice, cook slowly in slightly salted water. When done shake it lightly into a dish to separate the kernels. Then put into a baking dish sufficient olive oil to cover the bottom. Also oil the sides of the dish. Fill with layers of rice and grated cheese, using one pound of cheese to this amount of rice. Pour over it a tablespoon of olive oil and bake forty-five minutes.

ITALIAN CREAM

TWO tablespoonfuls gelatin soaked in one cup milk; let soak two hours; one pint cream whipped; one cup pulverized sugar; whites of two eggs beaten stiff and stirred in cream; one teaspoonful vanilla. Put milk in double boiler until milk is dissolved, then strain through cloth; let it cool and stir ingredients all together.

CARAMEL COFFEE JELLY

SOAK half a package of granulated gelatin in half a cupful of cold water. Cook three-fourths of a cupful of sugar to caramel, add one cupful of boiling water, and let simmer until the caramel is dissolved, then pour over the softened gelatin; add also one cupful of strong black coffee, half a cupful of water, and half a cupful of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then turn into the mold. Serve cold with whipped cream. A boiled custard made of a pint of milk, three egg yolks, and one-third of a cupful of sugar may replace the cream if preferred.

The Grocery Boy Outwits the Pretty Cook

By KENNETT HARRIS

"WHO'S been abusin' you, Evelina?" demanded the grocery boy, fiercely, as the pretty cook turned a tearful face toward him.

"Show me the color of his hair and don't try to hold me back once I get started."

"There wouldn't be any need of it, I guess," said the pretty cook, putting down the onions she was peeling and wiping her eyes on a corner of her apron. "You wouldn't be dangerous turned loose."

"Oh, I don't know," returned the grocery boy. "You feed me on raw meat and keep me tied for a week or two and I'm a terror. Say, I seen a piece in the Household Hints that said if you peeled onions under water, they wouldn't make you cry."

"That's all right, but I ain't going to bother to put on a bathing suit every time I want to stuff a goose," said the pretty cook. "What do you read Household Hints for?"

"So I can tell my wife how to live high on four dollars and twenty-two cents a week," replied the grocery boy. "I've got a friend who done that regular, and he got his woman down to four-ninety. If she hadn't got a divorce from him he could have been rich by this time on what she saved. There's some women who never do have any consideration for a man—specially when they're married to him."

"Poor fellow!" sighed the pretty cook. "Had to lose her just as he'd got her trained. That's the way it goes, ain't it?"

"I feel like weeping myself this morning," declared the grocery boy. "Another friend of mine's going to get married."

Not Fretting Over His Luck

"Cheer up," said the pretty cook. "He may have better luck."

"It ain't his luck I'm fretting over; it's mine," said the gorcery boy. "It's going to set me back half a week's wages for a wedding present."

"Why don't you just buy them a set of solid soup spoons or some little thing like that?" sugested the pretty cook. "No need of being extravagant."

"I suppose that would show I wished 'em well as much as if I sprung myself the way I was intending," mused the grocery boy. "If I did give 'em a set of rolled oak library furniture or an electric runabout, it might look as if I was spreading it too thick."

"Sure. Don't you do it," advised the cook.

"I suppose it wouldn't do to give them a few shares of good stock? Too much like handing them a roll of bills. Would you get something useful or ornamental Evelina? Soup spoons ain't ornamental and they wouldn't be much use to my friend because he most always drinks his soup right out of the bowl. How would a nice pedigreed Boston bull terrier strike you? I know where I can get one for about fifty dollars, including the collar? I don't know whether the girl he is going to marry is strong for pups or not. Of course, I could get a real lace shawl or a pearl necklace and please her, but he wouldn't get any good out of 'em and he might train a dog. It's hard to tell what to do, ain't it?"

"Sure," murmured the pretty cook, indifferently. "I should say it was."

"Well, that ain't much help, Evelina," remonstrated the grocery boy. "I was looking for some bright ideas on the subject from you. Now be a good fellow and tell me what you would do if you was me. I want to do the right thing."

"If I was you, I'd probably go down to the nearest ten-cent store and buy anything that took my fancy, no matter what it cost," advised the cook. "Go to the limit, regardless. Or you might get a heaven's - choicest - blessings-rest-upon-you postcard."

"Well, if that suits you, it's all right," said the grocery boy. "I suppose that I ought to have told you that my friend is the milkman. He was telling me yesterday that you and him had about made up your minds, and if he didn't change his, it was likely to be pretty soon now."

"You get out of here," said the pretty cook, reaching for the broom.

"You wouldn't be dangerous," she said, as she put down the onions that brought the tears to her eyes.

EMPHASIS IN DRESS

THERE is no lack of emphasis in dress just now, but that emphasis, a critical observer remarked the other day, rests entirely with its accessories.

Coats and skirts and frocks are not really extreme just now, the common sense of the majority has discarded the "hobble," the long, tight coat of the tailor suit has abbreviated and eased itself into the harmlessness of hip lengths, and with these changes there has occurred the lengthening of the skirt to a more graceful something that clears the instep rather than the ankle, and shows some distinction between the growing schoolgirl and her mother.

But with this desirable modifying all round of the main parts of a costume there coincides an exaggeration in other directions—mammoth muffs, wide swirling stoles, smaller hats, high, larger hats, low and wondrously wide from side to side, although they may be surprisingly short in front. Then when we assemble together to dine we wear long earrings, and wide, but often beautiful, bandeaux round our heads and although this is no new thing crowds of little curls. We seem to have modified our ways in one direction just to gain more margin in the other.

"NEAR" AIGRETTES.

NEAR aigrettes fill a long-felt want in that they save the feelings of those ladies whose sympathies are Audubonic, even while they make almost as pretty a decoration as the real things.

A hat of huge mushroom shape is of white velvet, with a two-inch band of black velvet edging the brim. It is trimmed with a profusion of black and white "near" agrettes.

A filet of black velvet shows up attractively a white parting and the sheen of the hair.

☘ Worldly Wisdom ☘

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

IT takes a very little thing at the start to make a very big thing go wrong.

A woman is kept so busy cheering up her husband and the children that she never gets around to cheering up herself.

A good way to find out a man's faults is to brag on him to his friends.

A woman's chief purpose in giving a man something to do around the house seems to be that she may criticise the way he goes about it.

One hears that expression, "Secrets of the toilet." There are no secrets of the toilet. Every one knows what the drug stores sell.

If a woman writes that she will arrive on a train Monday morning, make all preparations to meet her Wednesday afternoon.

If a husband goes willingly with his wife to a reception and stands in line without complaint, something is the matter with him as a business man.

There is nothing in life to worry the butterflies. When the first cold rain of the Fall bedraggles their wings some little black ant that worked hard all Summer while the butterfly loafed is overcome by pity and takes the butterfly in. But let misfortune overtake the little black ant and there is so little about him that is appealing or picturesque he does not receive the compassion he deserves.

The larger the city, the lower the women wear their dresses in the neck.

The children's idea of heaven is a place where all the mothers have colds, and big giants go around with handkerchiefs and wring their noses.

When a boy goes to the Family Wailing Place—his mother—half of what he says to her is "'Taint fair."

Be patient with the girl with the affected walk. In a very short time she will be wheeling a baby buggy with a gait suggestive of only one thought, and that is, haste to get there.

There isn't anything connected with poverty that is too hard to bear, so long as any sense of humor is left.

It makes no difference how plucky a man has had to be to acquire success, the people have a way of dropping the "p" when they tell about it.

Old-Time Frolics in Fashion

IT is said that frolics in country style, or in the style of bygone days, will have a great vogue this Winter. The first merrymakings certainly confirm the report.

Hostesses like the quaint setting with back-round of ancestral mahogany and crazy quilts, and the youthful guests relish the opportunity to dress up in the picturesque garments of long ago.

The old fashioned spelling bee is revived both for parlors and semi-public places, and the boys and girls in old-time dress spell each other down with as great enthusiasm as ever did young folk fifty years ago.

One fair committee even made a public entertainment of such a bee with great success. It may contain the germ of an idea for some other band similarly placed, for the plan as carried out was certainly well worth while.

The ladies sent a challenge to a prominent man's club, of which most of the husbands and brothers were members, offering to spell them down on a certain evening to be agreed upon among them.

The male contingent took mirthfully to the idea, and the challenge was accepted. On receipt of the date agreed upon the committee arranged for the printing and distribution of circulars announcing the contest to be held, and offering for sale reserved seats at popular prices.

The scene was a large hall, and as the reception accorded the announcements encouraged them to believe from the very outset, they had no difficulty in filling it. Not only those acquainted with both sets of contestants were interested, but the general public of the neighborhood was tickled by the idea, and old folks wished to attend in memory of old times.

The beauty of this entertainment was that it required no costumes, no scenery, nothing, in fact, but a little advance brushing up of the orthographical art on both sides. A committee of three or four from each body of competitors was appointed, and these committees appointed captains, who chose their own teams, secured referees, and appointed a person to give out the words.

Prizes were offered for the six best efforts, the first being a money prize, which the winner turned over to the good work. The one who stood up longest won first prize; the second last to go down had second choice, and so the fun went on.

The Bohemian Adventures of Prince Florizel

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

The Adventure of the Hansom Cab, in Four Instalments.

(Final Instalment.)

"PRESENT me to your friends," continued the first, and when that ceremony had been performed, "I wish, gentlemen," he added, with the most exquisite affability, "that I could offer you a more cheerful programme; it is ungracious to inaugurate an acquaintance upon serious affairs, but the compulsion of events is stronger than the obligations of good-fellowship. I hope and believe you will be able to forgive me this unpleasant evening, and for men of your stamp it will be enough to know that you are conferring a considerable favor."

"Your Highness," said the major, "must pardon my bluntness. I am unable to hide what I know. For some time back I have suspected Major Hammersmith, but Mr. Godall is unmistakable. To seek two men in London unacquainted with Prince Florizel of Bohemia was to ask too much at Fortune's hands."

"Prince Florizel!" cried Brackenbury in amazement.

And he gazed with the deepest interest on the features of the celebrated personage before him.

"I shall not lament the loss of my incognito," remarked the prince, "for it enables me to thank you with the more autohrity. You would have done as much for Mr. Godall, I feel sure, as for the Prince of Bohemia, but the latter can perhaps do more for you. The gain is mine," he added, with a courteous gesture.

Cool in the Face of Deat'

And the next moment he was conversing with the two officers about the Indian army and the native troops, a subject on which, as on all others, he had a remarkable fund of information and the soundest views.

There was something so striking in this man's attitude at a moment of deadly peril that Brackenbury was overcome with respectful admiration; nor was he less sensible to the charm of his conversation or the surprising amenity of his address.

Every gesture, every intonation, was not only noble in itself, but seemed to ennoble the fortunate mortal for whom it was intended, and Brackenbury confessed to himself with enthusiasm that this was a sovereign for whom a brave man might thankfully lay down his life.

Many minutes had thus passed, when the person who had introduced them into the house, and who had sat ever since in a corner, and with his watch in his hand, arose and whispered a word into the prince's ear.

"It is well, Dr. Noel," replied Florizel, aloud; and then addressing the others, "You will excuse me, gentlemen," he added, "if I have to leave you in the dark. The moment now approaches."

Dr. Noel extinguished the lamp. A faint, gray light, premonitory of the dawn, illuminated the window, but was not sufficient to illuminate the room, and when the prince rose to his feet, it was impossible to distinguish his features or to make a guess at the nature of the emotion which obviously affected him as he spoke. He moved toward the door, and placed himself at one side of it in an attitude of the warlest attention.

"You will have the kindness," he said, "to maintain the strictest silence, and to conceal yourselves in the densest of the shadow."

The three officers and the physician hastened to obey, and for nearly ten minutes the only sound in Rochester House was occasioned by the excursions of the rats behind the woodwork. At the end of that period a loud creak of a hinge broke in with surprising distinctness on the silence, and shortly after the watchers could distinguish a slow and cautious tread approaching up the kitchen stair.

At every second step the intruder seemed to pause and lend an ear, and during these intervals, which seemed of an incalculable duration, a profound disquiet possessed the spirit of the listeners.

Dr. Noel, accustomed as he was to dangerous emotions, suffered an almost pitiful physical prostration; his breath whistled in his lungs, his teeth grated one upon another, and his joints cracked aloud as he nervously shifted his position.

At last a hand was laid upo athe door, and the bolt shot back with a slight report. There followed another pause, during which Brackenbury could see the prince draw himself together noiselessly as if for some unusual exertion. Then the door opened, letting in a little more of the light of the morning, and the figure of a man appeared upon the threshold and stood motionless. He was tall, and carried a knife in his hand. Even in the twilight they could see his upper teeth bare and glistening, for his mouth was open like that of a hound about to leap. The man had evidently been over the head in water but a minute or two before, and even while he stood there the drops kept falling from his wet clothes and pattered on the floor.

The next moment he crossed the threshold. There was a leap, a stifled cry, an instantaneous struggle, and before Colonel Geraldine could spring to his aid, the Prince held the man, disarmed and helpless, by the shoulders.

"Dr. Noel," he said, "you will be so good as to relight the lamp."

And relinquishing the charge of his prisoner to Geraldine and Brackenbury, he crossed the room and set his back against the chimney piece. As soon as the lamp had kindled, the party beheld an unaccustomed sternness on the Prince's features. It was no longer Florizel, the careless gentleman; it was the Prince of Bohemia, justly incensed and full of deadly purpose, who now raised his head and spoke.

"President,' he said, "you have laid your last snare and your own feet are taken in it. The day is beginning; it is your last morning. You have just swum the Regent's Canal; it is your last bath in this world. Your old accomplice, Dr. Noel, so far from betraying me, has delivered you into my hands for judgment. And the grave you had dug for me this afternoon shall serve, in God's almighty providence, to hide your own just doom from the curiosity of mankind. Kneel and pray, sir, if you have a mind that way, for your time is short, and God is weary of your iniquities."

The president made no answer either by word or sign, but continued to hang his head and gaze sullenly at the floor, as though he were conscious of the prince's prolonged and unsparing regard.

"Gentlemen," continued Florizel, resuming the ordinary tone of his conversation, "this is a fellow who has long eluded me, but whom, thanks to Dr. Noel, I now have tightly by the heels. To tell the story of his misdeeds would occupy more time than we can now afford, but if the canal had contained nothing but the blood of his victims, I believe the wretch would have been no drier than you see him.

The Choice of Weapons

"Even in an affair of this sort I desire to preserve the forms of honor. But I make you my judge, gentlemen—this is more an execution than a duel, and to give the rogue his choice of weapons would be to push too far a point of etiquette. I cannot afford to lose my life in such a business," he continued, unlocking the case of swords; "and as a pistol bullet travels so often on the wings of chance, and skill and courage may fail by the most trembling marksman, I have decided, and I feel sure you will approve my determination, to put this question to the touch of swords."

When Brackenbury and Major O'Rooke, to whom these remarks were particularly addressed, had each intimated his approval, "Quick, sir," added Prince Florizel to the president, "choose a blade and do not keep me waiting. I have an impatience to be done with you forever."

For the first time since he was captured and disarmed the president raised his head, and it was plain that he began instantly to pluck up courage.

"Is it to be stand up?" he asked, eagerly, "and between you and me?"

"I meant so far to honor you," replied the prince.

"Oh, come," cried the president. "With a fair field, who knows how things may happen? I must add that I consider it handsome behavior on your Highness's part, and if the worst comes to the worst I shall die by one of the most gallant gentlemen in Europe."

And the president, liberated by those who had detained him, stepped up to the table and began with minute attention, to select a sword. He was highly elated, and seemed to feel no doubt that he would issue victorious from the contest. The spectators grew alarmed in the face of so entire a confidence, and adjured Prince Florizel to reconsider his intention.

"It is but a farce," he answered; "and I think I can promise you, gentlemen, that it will not be long a-playing."

"Your Highness will be careful not to overreach" said Colonel Geraldine.

"I Owe You His Death"

"Geraldine," returned the prince, "did you ever know me fall in a debt of honor? I owe you this man's death, and you shall have it."

The president at last satisfied himself with one of the rapiers and signified his readiness by a gesture that was not devoid of a rude nobility. The nearness of peril, and the sense of courage, even to this obnoxious villain, lent an air of manhood and a certain grace.

The prince helped himself at random to a sword.

"Colonel Geraldine and Dr. Noel," he said, "will have the goodness to await me in this room. I wish no personal friend of mine to be involved in this transaction. Mayor O'Rooke, you are a man of some years and a settled reputation—let me recommend the president to your good graces. Lieutenant Rich will be so good as to lend me his attentions; a young man cannot have too much experience in such affairs."

"Your Highness," replied Brackenbury, "it is an honor I shall prize extremely."

"It is well," returned Prince Florizel; "I shall hope to stand your friend in more important circumstances."

And so saying he led the way out of the apartment and down the kitchen stairs.

The two men who were thus left alone threw open the window and leaned out, straining every sense to catch an indication of the tragical events that were about to follow. The rain was now over; day had almost come, and the birds were piping in the shrubbery and on the forest trees of the garden.

The prince and his companions were visible for a moment as they followed an alley between two flowering thickets, but at the first corner a clump of foliage intervened, and they were again concealed from view. This was all that the colonel and the physician had an opportunity to see, and the garden was so vast, and the place of combat evidently so remote from the house, that not even the noise of sword play reached their ears.

"He has taken him toward the grave," said Dr. Noel, with a shudder.

"God," cried the colonel. "God defend the right!"

And they awaited the event in silence, the doctor shaking with fear, the colonel in an agony of sweat. Many minutes must have elapsed, the day was sensibly broader, and the birds were singing more heartily in the garden before a sound of returning footsteps recalled their glances toward the door. It was the prince and two Indian officers who entered. God had defended the right.

"I am ashamed of my emotion," said Prince Florizel; "I feel it a weakness unworthy of my station, but the continued existence of that hound of hell had begun to prey upon me like a disease, and his death has more refreshed me than a night of slumber. Look, Geraldine," he continued, throwing his sword upon the floor, "there is the blood of the man who killed your brother. It should be a welcome sight.

"And yet," he added, "see how strangely we men are made! My revenge is not yet five minutes old, and already I am beginning to ask myself if even revenge be attainable on this precarious stage of life. The ill he did, who can undo it? The career in which he amassed a huge fortune (for the house itself in which he stayed belonged to him)—that career is now a part of the destiny of mankind forever, and I might weary myself making thrusts in carte until the crack of judgment, and Geraldine's brother would be none the less dead, and a thousand other innocent persons would be none the less dishonored and debauched! The existence of a man is so small a thing to take, so mighty a thing to take, so mighty a thing to employ! Alas!" he cried, "is there anything in life so disenchanting as attainment?"

"God's justice has been done," replied the doctor. "So much I behold. The lesson, your Highness, has been a cruel one for me, and I await my own turn with deadly apprehension."

"What was I saying?" cried the prince. "I have punished, and here is the man beside us who can help me to undo. Ah, Dr. Noel! you and I have before us many a day of hard and honorable toil, and, perhaps, before we have done, you may have more than redeemed your early errors."

"And in the meantime," said the doctor, "let me go and bury my oldest friend."

(And this, observes the erudite Arabian, is the fortunate conclusion of the tale. The prince, it is superfluous to mention, forgot none of those who served him in this great exploit, and to this day his authority and influence help them forward in their public career, while his condescending friendship adds a charm to their private life. To collect, continues the author, all the strange events in which this prince has played the part of Providence were to fill the habitable globe with books. But the stories which relate to the fortunes of "The Rajah's Diamond" are of too entertaining a description, says he, to be omitted. Following prudently in the footsteps of this Oriental, we shall now begin the series to which he refers with the "Story of the Bandbox."

Prince Florizel's further adventures will be told in "The Rajah's Diamond," the "Story of the Bandbox" beginning in to-morrow's BOSTON AMERICAN.

TRY THIS IF YOU ACHE ALL OVER
FROM A BAD COLD OR THE GRIPPE

Nothing else that you can take will break your cold or end grippe so promptly as a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

The most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, running of the nose, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness, rheumatism pains and other distress begin to leave after the very first dose.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

MEN OF AFFAIRS IN STATE STREET

James J. Phelan—No. 3.

JAMES J PHELAN

Mr. James J. Phelan of the firm of Hornblower & Weeks, is one of the most successful men in New England finance and though still a young man, being born in Toronto in 1871, his opinion is eagerly sought by his firm's clientele which extends across the continent.

In developing his firm's business Mr. Phelan has been [illegible] the most important factor and to-day the house has offices in Boston, New York, Chicago, Detroit, New Haven, Hartford, Newport and Providence and membership in the Boston, New York, Chicago and Salt Lake Stock and Mining Exchanges.

Mr. Phelan started his career as a boy in State Street and showed such market intuition [illegible] that when Hornblower & Weeks succeeded Hornblower & Page he was the first [illegible]. He joined the Stock Exchange in 1897 and became so indispensable that he was admitted to the firm in [illegible] since which time all other offices have been established. Though still retaining his exchange membership Mr. Phelan is never seen on the floor. On account of many interests in banking and industrial corporations, this Spring Mr. Phelan was obliged to resign the presidency of the Federal Trust Company because of the pressure of business. The most recent of Mr. Phelan's enterprises is the Connecticut Valley Lumber Company, of which he is president.

While he has often been pressed to be a candidate for the Mayoralty, and has refused, he is always ready to serve in a philanthropic way and devotes every spare minute to his three delightful children who show the inheritance of his wonderful character. Although Mr. Phelan's hobby is art, and he has become quite a connoisseur, he does not fail to realize that an active and sound mind needs a healthy body and therefore he is an enthusiastic sportsman.

DEFENDS GERMAN INDUSTRIAL SYSTEM

Dr. Albert Sudekum of the German Reichstag defended the industrial system of his country at the Economic Club dinner at the [illegible] House.

The sensation of the evening, however, came late, when Dr. Albert Sudekum of the German Reichstag defended the industrial system of his country. E. N. Wrightington had put forward a series of plausible arguments against the State or municipal ownership of public utilities.

"There is commercially no municipal and politically no trust," said Dr. Sudekum in reply, in discussing "The Corporation in Relation to Politics" in Germany. "There can be no question of corruption connected with rates and prices in a country where the State, that is, the people, own much the greater part of the railroads, the coal and other mines and the forests." He showed that State and municipal ownership of public utilities had proven a perfect success, economically, in his country. "But," said he, turning suddenly to Mr. Wrightington, "Public ownership is not primarily a matter of economics. We, in Germany, believe it to be, first of all, a social and human question."

WOMAN QUITS $3,500 JOB TO ENTER LAW

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The highest salaried woman in the Government service, Miss Annie H. Shortridge, has resigned the position of law clerk in the office of the solicitor of the State department in order to practice law. Miss Shortridge in September, 1909, was appointed to the place just relinquished at an annual salary of $3,500. Miss Shortridge was born in Dalkeith, Scotland. In early life she went to New York and was employed for some time as a stenographer. In July, 1893, she was appointed a clerk in the department of justice in this city, and while there she studied law.

LEXINGTON MINUTE MEN TO JOIN MILITIA

At a dinner given by the Minute Men and the Lexington Winter Carnival Association in the old Paul Revere Tavern at Lexington, a letter from ex-Governor Guild was read, offering the suggestion that the Minute Men form and offer to the State militia, as soon as a charter becomes vacant, a company formed from the men of military age within their own ranks. The suggestion was hailed with three cheers, and every evidence was shown that such a company will be formed.

MOTOR TRUCK MEN ORGANIZE

By J. C. KERRISON.

The organization of the Boston Motor Truck Association was completed and made permanent at a meeting presided over by President J. W. Maguire, held at No. 5 Park square, yesterday. The association starts off with the following members: J. W. Maguire, representing the Pierce Truck; A. B. Underhill, Knox; J. H. McAlman, Stearns; Carroll Doubleday, Peerless; C. G. Andrews, Moon; Paul R. Curtis, Victor; [illegible], Hart-Kraft; J. H. Johnson, [illegible]; L. B. Reiner, Rapid; G. A. Patten, Reo; J. S. Hathaway, White; V. A. Charles, Interstate; C. F. Whitney, Alco; J. L. McKane, Overland; A. B. Cumner, Autocar, and A. B. Henley.

Matters effecting the organization of the association, as a whole, were discussed and considered. A special committee, consisting of Carroll Doubleday, A. B. Cumner and L. B. Butler, was appointed to consider the affairs of the organization and report back at a future meeting.

Chester A. Weaver, manager of the Studebaker Company of California, with headquarters in San Francisco and Los Angeles, is making a short visit to Boston, being entertained while here by Charles Addison Malley, of the local Studebaker Company.

Mr. Weaver says that business on the coast is in admirable condition, and has reached a state of perfection surpassed by no other section of the country. He says: "We have no trouble in selling cars. It is only a question of how to get them, as shown by the fact we now have coming in our territory no less than 641 E. M. F.'s. This he considers the greatest number of cars retailed by any one branch or agent, anywhere in the country."

James Braden of the Diamond Rubber Company made a flying trip to Boston yesterday, visiting Local Manager Weller and making an inspection of the new building of the Diamond Company on Boylston street. Mr. Braden is very much pleased with the expeditious manner in which the new headquarters of his company is being constructed, and after a thorough inspection of the same, expressed the belief that when finished it will be one of the most complete and thorough buildings of its kind in the country.

His local branch, occupying as it does one of the largest buildings in the city, is found to be absolutely inadequate to keep up with the constant increase of the local business. Hence it was considered necessary and advisable to secure a building planned and constructed along the [illegible] in the Diamond Company.

Manager Alfred Ames of the local branch of the Fisk Rubber Company is attending the annual convention of the Fisk tire representatives at the home office in Springfield this week.

At a recent meeting of stockholders of the Knox Automobile Company, it was voted to increase authorized capital to [illegible], comprising 5,000 new common and 10,000 preferred shares. The Massachusetts Secretary of State has approved of the increase.

CHELSEA AFTER NEW PLAN OF GOVERNMENT

Twenty-five citizens were chosen at a mass meeting held in Chelsea to formulate a new plan of municipal government for the city to replace the present emergency one. Several new forms of municipal government were suggested. Perhaps the most notable was the one offered by Willard Howland. His plan was that as large a body of citizens as could be practically gathered together as a deliberative body be chosen in a manner similar to the jury system, and that this gathering choose a smaller body to be known as a council, and also select a presiding officer for meetings of both bodies. These two to have all the functions of a city council. Former Alderman William Williams suggested a board of nine members, one from each of the five wards and four at large, and one to be designated by the people as presiding officer of the board.

METHODIST FAVORS SPORTS ON SUNDAY

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Delegates to the Methodist National Conference for Social Service were told by one of their number that Sunday baseball and motion pictures, long under the ban of the Methodist church, should have the official sanction instead of the official ban and should be patronized instead of shunned. Dr. Edward A. Peterson of Goodrich House of Cleveland said: "It is good and wise legislation which forbids work on Sunday, for that is the only way of assuring its being observed, but where we forbid play we make Sunday a day of idleness for most young people. Of course, we must insist on observance of church services."

MRS. SNOWDEN TO TALK TO SOCIALISTS

Mrs. Philip Snowden, who has been termed the greatest woman orator of England, and Dr. Albert Sudekin, socialist member of the German Reichstag, will be the speakers at the socialist mass meeting in Tremont Temple to-night. Mrs. Snowden is the wife of a Socialist member of the British Parliament and is an ardent advocate of woman suffrage, but is not of the militant type of suffragists.

NEGRO BANDIT SHOT AFTER TRAIN HOLDUP

MEMPHIS, Dec. 1.—A bullet from a railroad watchman's revolver killed Jack Thomas, a negro, while Thomas was holding up the white passengers in the smoking car of the St. Louis-Memphis limited train just outside this city. Thomas had terrorized the passengers with a revolver and had robbed several of them when A. B. Walton, the watchman, entered the car and fired, the bullet striking the negro just above the heart.

SOCIETY FILLS BOXES AT OPERA

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Again last night the opera was the rallying ground for the fashionables and the gowns and gayety made the scene one of exceeding interest. The smart ones are gradually getting back into place from their wanderings and last night any number of the elite made their first appearance there since the opening of the season in town. They are all flocking home from the uttermost ends of the earth for the Christmas holiday and the incident festivities and so make life all the more interesting in their exclusive circle and especially so the opera.

Perhaps two of the most interesting women in the boxes last night were Madame Nordica and Madame Melba. Madame Melba, in an exquisite robe of cream [illegible] saline lace and pearls, was a guest of Mrs. "Jack" Gardner in her box in the lower tier, while Madame Nordica was a guest in the Jordan box and was gorgeous in a tunic of gold lace over white satin, trimmed with sable and emeralds. Mrs. Gardner was radiant in black panne velvet and her famous string of diamonds.

Beaming and in a gay mood was Mrs. Gordon Abbott, one of the bright particular stars of the horse show. Her gown was a wonderful creation of white and gold brocade, the bodice embroidered in brilliants.

Mrs. Helen Sears graced the Burnham box in a gown of white satin brocade made on the latest lines, with the straight skirt without a tuck or gather in it, and a wide black satin girdle. Her mother, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, who has completely thrown aside her mourning, wore a handsome gown of palest yellow velvet trimmed with bands of sable, and a diamond collar.

Mrs. Bennett's Handsome Gown.

Miss Nina Burnham, who made her second appearance at the opera this season, was as slender and girlishly pretty as ever in her gown of cloud chiffon over white satin with touches of pink in the bodice.

Mrs. J. L. Brown, who was also in the Burnham box, was in white satin with overdress of deep rose chiffon.

One of the handsomest gowns was that worn by Mrs. Stephen Bennett. It was cloth of silver over emerald green satin and her jewels were diamonds. Mrs. William D. Rogers, who was with Mrs. Bennett, was in pastel green satin trimmed with [illegible] of gold and Persian embroidery. Mrs. Oliver Ames, who had several guests in her box, was in white satin and diamonds.

Miss Christine Hunnewell and Miss Alice Bolt, who were among the earliest in the foyer after the first act, were two of the best looking girls present. Miss Hunnewell wore pink chiffon over pink satin with a deep phalange of blue and Miss Bolt was dainty and sweet in deep rose satin and silvered lace.

One of the most interesting of the younger matrons there was Mrs. Alexander [illegible], Jr., who was quite as charming as in her debutante days. She was in white satin made with a very close fitting skirt trimmed with bands of silvered chiffon and pale blue satin. A cluster of pink rosebuds on the bodice gave a pretty touch of color. Miss Elsa Brennan was in black lace. Mrs. Alfred Whittier wore a modish gown of white lace trimmed with sable.

Miss Warren There.

Miss Dorothy Jordan, who was holding quite a reception in the foyer, was as picturesquely gowned as usual, her sartorial effulgence last night being white spangled lace over white satin with phalange of black velvet. A cluster of pink roses adorned the bodice. Mrs. Samuel Mixter in black lace over black satin, was among those surrounding her.

Mrs. N. I. Bowditch, who resembles so closely her sister, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, was in black velvet.

Miss Katherine Warren made her first appearance this season, and was with her fiance, John E. Thayer. Her gown was of black satin.

Mrs. Charles P. Greenough was in white satin and Miss Elizabeth Wells was charming in apple green chiffon, with phalange of black velvet.

Miss Mary Shreve Ames, who entertained a large number of guests in her box, wore a becoming creation of gray satin and lace.

Mrs. William Y. Powers was in black lace over green and Mrs. William Gaston was in deep green satin.

Mrs. Thomas Allen was in old rose brocaded satin, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley was in black; Mrs. Philip Wadsworth in pale gray satin with bands of black velvet and Mrs. H. P. Chapman in white satin and diamonds.

ALICE NIELSEN SINGS "MADAME BUTTERFLY" ROLE

"Madame Butterfly" was produced for the first time this season at the Boston Opera House last night. Alice Nielsen sang the title role and was perfectly aware that expert eyes were on her.

Nellie Melba sat in Mrs. Jack Gardner's box and applauded rapturously. Alice Nielsen is going to the Symphony concert Friday afternoon and do the same for Melba.

Lillian Nordica sat with Mr. and Mrs. Eben D. Jordan and she also was conspicuous in applause. Prima donas always applaud one another to show they haven't got jealous dispositions.

But Miss Nielsen deserved all the applause she received and more for it was an unusually feeble-fisted congregation. Her "Madame Butterfly" has ripened since last season. It is a stronger and finer interpretation. She was always charming and Japanese-like in the pretty scenes of the first two acts, but now she is able to create the tragedy of the final scene.

And her voice was sweet and fresh and rang with true dramatic power in the tragic scenes while it was exquisite in the Butterfly song and the flower music.

There is not much for a tenor in "Butterfly," but Herman Jadlowker is a better tenor than we have seen in the role of B. F. Pinkerton recently. He looked the dashing naval officer in his uniform of whites in the first act, but any naval officer who appeared in the blue uniform coat which he donned in the last act would have been court-martialed instantly. It looked like the dress coat of the third mate of a Down East potato schooner.

The big wax doll, which was used in "Butterfly" last season because of the child labor law, did service again last night. It is rather absurd to see the singers fondling and kissing a doll, but the law must be obeyed, and Miss Nielson says she doesn't want any dwarfs as substitutes for a real child. She will kiss a doll or a child but not a dwarf.

"Madame Butterfly" has been familiar to us for ten years as a play and six years as a grand opera, so it is rather late in the day to wonder why the U. S. Government permitted Naval officers to carry on with Tea House girls the way Benjamin Franklin Pinkerton did in Japan.

And it has probably often been pointed out that the captain of the Cruiser Abraham Lincoln committed a grave offense against the regulations in allowing Pinkerton to bring a wife out from America on the warship.

Lots of Americans feel proud that a countryman of theirs figures in the grand opera of "Madame Butterfly" but they really ought to feel ashamed. Pinkerton was no gentleman.

To Buick Oil Company Stockholders
Special Announcement

David D. Buick, President of the Buick Oil Company of California, begs to announce that on and after this date, all mail or inquiries regarding the stock as well as all correspondence from subscribers, should be addressed to the Chicago office of the Company. Mr. Buick desires the public and the Oil Company stockholders to know that, while he was unfortunate in permitting the sale of his Company's stock through a New York agency, such sales were made through his ignorance of the standing and the past record of the agency offering the sale of this stock.

But, that no stockholder or person having purchased stock or subscribed through the New York agency will be injured thereby, the Buick Oil Company's affairs are on a sound financial basis with wells nearing the gusher state in the very heart of proven oil territory. Mr. Buick wishes to assure every stockholder that he will be treated fairly and squarely along business lines and that all those interested in the Buick Oil Company can communicate with Mr. David D. Buick, President of the Company, at his Chicago office, 420 Marquette Building, Chicago, Illinois.

If you have made any inquiries regarding the stock in the past few days, you will receive prompt reply and all latest information from the property direct from my Chicago office.

CONTEST DIRECTOR'S REMARKS

Q.—Do towns, cities and rivers have to be located in the United States?
A.—No.

Q.—Do you have to mention the State or country in which the town, city or river or lake is located?
A.—No.

Q.—Is it necessary to have the picture and coupon attached?
A.—Yes.

Q.—Do we have to get twenty-five boys, or twenty-five girls, or twenty-five of either or both?
A.—Twenty-five NEW ENROLLMENTS.

Q.—How do I get back numbers?
A.—Try your newsdealer. If he cannot supply you, write to the Educational Contest Director and back pictures will be sent you if you are a NEWLY ENROLLED contestant.

Q.—Is it necessary to be a school child?
A.—No.

Q.—Do you have to say only the name, or tell if it is a river or lake?
A.—Just the name will suffice.

Q.—Does the mark in the lower right-hand corner of the picture have anything to do with the answer?
A.—No.

Q.—Must answers be written in pencil or ink?
A.—Either will do.

Q.—Does the writing compare? How does the small child compare with the older one?
A.—Neatness of work.

Q.—Will typewritten answers be accepted?
A.—No.

Q.—Is it necessary to send in more than one enrollment?
A.—Positively no; one is enough.

Q.—Can I use a rubber stamp on answers?
A.—No. Answers must be in contestant's own handwriting.

To each regularly ENROLLED contestant who sends us twenty-five NEW ENROLLMENTS, we will give a choice of the following handsome prizes:

ONE GOLD PLATED JEWEL BOX
ONE 14 KARAT FOUNTAIN PEN OR
ONE PURSE OR BILLFOLD

Get twenty-five of your boy or girl friends to ENROLL, fill in the blanks, have them turn them over to you, and YOU send them to the Educational Contest Director, Boston American. When the twenty-five NEW ENROLLMENTS are received (properly filled in) the Educational Contest Director will send you your choice of the above-named handsome articles.

NOTICE!

If you have not ENROLLED do so TO-DAY.

If you have ENROLLED, get twenty-five NEW ENROLLMENTS, and earn one of the valuable prizes mentioned above

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCK MARKET IS STILL DULL

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Continued dullness and irregularity prevailed all through the early stock trading to-day, with gains and losses about evenly divided throughout the general list and averaging ⅛ to ⅝ of a point. The Gould stocks were extremely weak during the early trading. Denver & Rio Grande preferred sold off 2½ points to 67½ during the first twenty minutes. Stocks were for sale in large volumes, but there appeared to be apparently few buyers. Pronounced feverishness shortly appeared and urgent selling, particularly in the railway stocks followed. Lehigh Valley was a pronounced factor in the early trading, showing a gain of ¾. This stock later fell back, but again moved up. Union Pacific selling ex-dividend, opened at 171⅝, while Steel, also selling ex-dividend, opened at a gain of ¼ of a point. Under moderate pressure the last named stock included ¾ of a point, but within the next twenty minutes made up more than this loss.

Southern Pacific sold off ⅝, Reading moved up ½, and St. Paul moved up ¼ to 122½.

October gross earnings for Missouri, Kansas & Texas amounted to $3,164,139, an increase of $308,035. Net earnings of that road for October amounted to $1,229,400. Reading's gross earnings for the same month amounting to $4,003,362, a decrease of $50,237. Net earnings for the same month amounted to $1,453,398, a decrease of $251,829. Reading's statement showing decreases both in the gross and net earnings for October were worse than expected.

The curb was quiet and irregular. American stocks were slightly higher in London.

The copper stocks were strong.

CAUGHT IN FOLDING BED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Benjamin Lott, a civil engineer, lies in the Harlem Hospital with a broken neck and with scarcely a chance of recovery as a result of being caught in a folding bed in his home early to-day.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The Bank of England today reduced its minimum rate of discount ½ per cent to 4½ per cent. The 5 per cent rates had been in effect since October 20.

$ $ $

As has been said before, the bulls are feeling for the public all the time, and will not be content until a level is reached which will prove attractive to the outsiders. When they come in the work of the pool will be considerably simplified.

$ $ $

That a very pretty fight is on there is no doubt; but the bulls, so far from avoiding conflict, are eager for the fray. What they want is activity, and they feel assured they can hold up their end. The enormous increase in the short interest is particularly to their liking.

$ $ $

Most of the borrowing demand is for United States Steel common, Reading and Union Pacific, and shows that the bears are determined to carry the war into the enemy's camp. These leaders are setting the pace for the other securities in the list, and as they go so goes the market.

$ $ $

The true story of how J. P. Morgan, President Taft and Attorney-General Wickersham drew up a Federal incorporation bill, as exclusively told in this column yesterday, has been responsible for considerable selling. A version of the story published in another newspaper was officially denied.

$ $ $

What has been desired in the stock market is public participation, and there are numerous evidences that the demand for the standard issues is better than it was, while investors—the most conservative ones at that—show an inclination to buy on the recessions. These people have studied the market position carefully and have come to the conclusion that it is sound. It being satisfactory to them, they are not hanging back, but are taking advantage of opportunities that may not be presented again very soon.

LOST AND FOUND

Shopping days have their troubles and disappointments the same as everything else. Especially so when one discovers the loss of their coin purse. But quick action on the loser's part in advertising for same under this column will be the means of its return and the lifting of a lot of unnecessary worry.

$25 REWARD

AT THE
HENRY F. MILLER
PIANO WAREROOMS,
395 Boylston Street.

DO NOT let this Christmas go by without providing your home with a piano—perhaps a player-piano. Besides some unusual bargains in slightly used Henry F. Miller pianos, we have secured from very reliable other makers some beautiful new pianos (selling elsewhere ordinarily at about $350) which we offer specially for this Christmas at $225 to $275, and on easy terms, $10 down and $5 per month; player-pianos from $550 upwards. Select early; we will deliver the day you want it. Remember we employ no "canvassers" in our business, thereby saving you big and unnecessary commissions, so show the lowest, uncolored, best stock of pianos and player-pianos in Boston and at lowest prices at our warerooms the child can buy as cheaply and as wisely as the expert. We think that way the best way to do the piano business, established 1863, our reliability is unquestioned. HENRY F. MILLER & SONS PIANO COMPANY

Separate Districts for Negroes A Very Serious Proposition

Such Measures Are Dangerous, Reactionary. Most Serious Thought Should Be Given to Them and to Their Unconstitutionality.

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner.

We received from Mr. Dubois, an able member of the negro race, a letter of protest, dignified and temperate, against recent plans of white men concerning negroes.

First is mentioned the proposition in Baltimore to segregate the colored people and compel them to live within certain restricted districts of the city.

It is true that the establishment of homes of colored people in neighborhoods hitherto unfrequented by them causes antagonism and may produce trouble and disturb real estate values. But it is also true that it is dangerous, unjust and unworthy of this century to revive the obsolete ghetto system, denying to certain human beings the right to live where they please and where they can.

We suppose that a white man who owns a house has a legal right to sell it to a negro if he pleases. And we suppose that the highest court in the country will sustain the right of a colored man to LIVE in his own home, subject to the tax laws and regulations of his neighborhood.

Probably the plan to compel a hundred thousand colored people in Baltimore to live all together in one neighborhood could not legally be enforced.

Certainly such a plan would result in creating in that city one great centre of dangerous discontent, one possible cause of riot and acute race conflict.

If the white people say to the colored men, "You shall not live in our neighborhood," the colored citizens would have a perfect right, surely, to forbid the whites to live in their part of the city. And there would be a city divided against itself most dangerously.

The peculiarities and antagonisms of the colored people—if such exist—would be developed and intensified under such a compulsory negro settlement. There would be inevitable clashes with the whites living on the edge of that settlement.

We do not believe that the Baltimore idea can be carried out without producing intensified hatreds, riots and bloodshed, even supposing it to be legal.

Certainly the matter is one which should be discussed temperately and good-naturedly by blacks and whites alike. The whites should always remember in their dealings with the colored race that the latter race is here AGAINST ITS WILL, NOT OF ITS OWN ACCORD, and through great injustice. Criminal white men, running slave ships for the worst kind of profit, brought the unfortunate Africans to America against their will. They were beaten, murdered, they died by thousands of disease in the stifling holds of ships, and the survivors were made slaves when they got here.

They have only just escaped from slavery.

With very few exceptions this is the first, or at most the second, generation of the colored people able to read or write.

The negroes have endured great wrongs at the hands of the white man, and, excepting occasional crimes, which whites themselves commit also, the negroes have been patient, law-abiding and immensely useful to this country.

The South understands the colored man far better than the North. What we write and what we say is written with emphatic recognition of the fact that the problem of the colored race is very largely a problem of and for the South.

However, we know that in the South, where the colored people are understood and appreciated, their property rights are rigorously respected, they are encouraged to save and to buy, and are treated as friends, not as pariahs. We believe that this idea of segregation will not be pushed or widely indorsed. If the colored people choose to live together, that is their privilege. But NO COMPULSION.

There are millions of colored men and women in America—a nation within our nation. They have built up some of our greatest national products. Their labor created the wealth of the South under the direction of the white man's knowledge.

It is a fact, of course, that the white race, in power and in knowledge, greatly excels the colored race, as it excels the yellow and the brown races.

It is a fact that the whites must and will continue to control legislation, politics and administration everywhere in this country.

But all property rights, religious rights and personal rights of the colored man are and should be as sacred as the rights of any white man. We believe that to be the sentiment of the Southern people. We believe that the African race has improved greatly in every point of view by contact with the race that has the traditions of centuries of education. The man or woman who talks of social equality is an evil mischief maker and the worst enemy of the colored man.

Socially a man may do as he pleases. The white man, as an individual or as a race, has a perfect right to decline social equality with any other race, but the colored man has exactly the same right. Each HAS THE RIGHT TO KEEP TO HIMSELF and no right to intrude himself upon the other.

But this Baltimore proposition, which may have no higher motive than to protect certain real estate interests that imagine themselves threatened, and that would forbid the colored man to invest his money in competition with others and to occupy his own property when purchased, would stir up trouble out of all proportion to any imaginary benefit.

SAY, HENPECKO,— LET'S PLAY A JOKE ON YOUR WIFE!
MY WIFE!!— OH NO!
HELLO, MRS. HENPECKO: YOUR HUSBAND IS PLAYING PINOCHLE IN JAKE'S BACK ROOM!
NO! NO! DON'T!
NOW WHEN SHE GOES OUT TO GET YOU, WE'LL SNEAK IN THE HOUSE THE BACK WAY!
YES BUT SHE'LL COME BACK!
COURSE SHE WILL AND WE'LL GIVE HER THE GRAND LAUGH!
YES, I SEE, BUT —
HERE SHE COMES NOW! WAIT TILL YOU SEE THE LOOK ON HER FACE!
LOAFER! THIS IS YOUR WORK! HENRY WOULD NEVER DARE DO SUCH A THING!

MASTER of sweet and loving lore,
Give us the open mind
To know religion means no more,
No less, than being kind.

Give us the comprehensive sight
That sees another's need;
And let our aim to set things right
Prove God inspired our creed.

Give us the soul to know our kin
That dwells in flock and herd,
The voice to fight man's shameful sin
Against the beast and bird.

Give us a heart with love so fraught
For all created things,
That even our unspoken thought
Bears healing on its wings.

Give us religion that will cope
With life's colossal woes,
And turn a radiant face of hope
On troops of pigmy foes.

Give us the mastery of our fate
In thoughts so warm and white,
They stamp upon the brows of hate
Love's glorious seal of light.

Give us the strong, courageous faith
That makes of pain a friend.
And calls the secret word of death
"Beginning," and not "end."

He Writes About The Coming Amazons

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I SEE sed Ma to Pa last nite, that sum grate doctor has sed that wimmen is gitting taller & hevvier & that beefoar vary long thay will be moar formidabel than the men. Well, sed Pa, in sum respecks thay have always been moar formidabel than the men, maybe beekaus of thare form.

Doan't be flip, sed Ma, what I sed I meen. I honestly beeleeve that grate doctor was right wen he sed that in time the men wud be afrade of the wimmen.

You cant beeleeve everything that the doctors tell you, sed Pa, & if I was you I wuddent try to do anything in the Amazon line in yure deelings with yure husband. It wud be a pitiful thing, sed Pa, if a gurl weigh-ing 150 pounds red a lot of them doctor articles & trie to browbeat a man weigh-ing 240. She mite have to send for the same doctor later on, ser Pa, & I say this moar in a spirit of kindness than in any other way. It is not exactly a threat.

Just then Missus Jones caim in, & beefoar she had took off her raps she sed, I say, did you hear about that grate doctor that sed that almost beefoar we know it us gurls will be taller & stronger than the men. I hoap it will cum in my time, sed Missus Jones. My husband caim in late three nites in a row, & I think it is about time for me to put the crusher on him.

That is a mistake, gurls, take it from me. The day of universal peace is almost here, & all the married cuppels will reefrane from quarling. It has been sed, Pa told Missus Jones, that there will be universal peace inside of ten yeers.

There will nevver be anything like that in my time, seed Missus Jones, & even if thay started it I wud prepare for war jest the same.

Then Missus White caim in. Good evening, folks, sed Missus White, did you hear the good news? Our gratest doctor says that the ladies is getting larger & stronger every yeer. I thing the dear old doctor is perfeckly right. I feel myself that I am almost as large as Mister White this vary minnit. Some of these days I may be abel to rule him by force insted of by kindness, as I always ruled him in the past.

Was you ruling him by kindness the night I brought him hoam from the meeting of the Comity of Sixteen? sed Pa to Missus White. Dou you call it ruling a man by kindness wen you wont let him git in the flat? Maybe you gurls will be a large sex in time, Pa sed, but you must reemember that doctors rite out a lot of fake perskripshuns.

Then Missus Brown caim in. My goodness, sed Pa, sumbody must have paiged you, how did you happen to drop in all in a bunch? Yes, Pa sed, I have heard the news, the men is gitting smaller & the ladies, hevings bless them, is gitting taller & stronger. As far back as I can reemember, Pa sed, the ladies have been tall enuff and strong enuff to proteck themselfs. My mother only weighed a hundred pounds, Pa sed, & she was tall & strong enuff to maik my father look like the last rose of summer, any time that thay evver had a mix, & the old gent was a large person, too, sed Pa.

I am glad that all you gurls dropped in, sed Pa, so that I can tell you one (1) thing, & that is that the strong men is eesiest ruled by the deer littel wives thay have now. Wen the day cums that yure sex looks like a lot of champeen lady wrestlers, the men will be harder to manage than they have ever been in the past. It is the deer littel gurls of the present that we luv, & to them I drink a toast.

The Red Corpuscle

By WEX JONES

THE RED CORPUSCLE stories of action have established a new standard of magazine making. A Brookline subscriber writes: "After reading two of your stories I began to feel a contempt for literature. After reading the third story I became so excited that I began to run around our kitchen table hurling chunks of furniture out of the window. As I have now to save money for more furniture, I cannot renew my subscription to your magazine." From Maine a farmer writes: "Began to read one of your action stories to my hired man, and he rushed out to do the chores." In far-away Canada our stories have caused strong men to roll down glaciers and have induced others to reach almost inaccessible points among the mountains. THE RAGE OF THE RAJAH.

Our Great Serial Story of Oriental Guile, Occidental Daring and Other Things.

The Rajah was in a rage in India, a suburb of Indigo.

He kicked a large pearl savagely across the room.

The Rajah was mad because he was only a rajah and not a maharajah.

The latter kind of potentate can—and does—give a mere rajah the mahaha.

The ruler of Bangboda made another kick at the pearl, and, missing it, threw a handful of precious stones through the window.

At that moment Ali Anderson, a portly Hindoo or Hindu entered the room.

As the Rajah's chief counsellor, Ali had the right to entree, not infrequently followed by a roast.

He now salaamed, kow-towed and chow-chowed, after which he said in a trembling voice:

"Bulbul chutney choprassie by jinks."

The effect upon the Rajah was electrical.

Seizing a scimitar from the head poultry cook, he rushed at the unfortunate counsellor, who had nothing but a soft answer with which to turn away the deadly weapon. In an agony of fear, Ali tried to think of something sufficiently soothing.

But while this was going on a stranger had entered the window.

"Stop!"

This one word was enough.

What was the secret of his power?

Alas! we shall never know, for that very day he and an elephant met while going in opposite directions.

AFTER THE POLE.

A Tale of a Daring Dash Into the Unknown Wilds of Brazil.

Smith was fitting out the Forward for an expedition to the pole.

Contrary to the usual practice he was equipping the vessel to meet tropical, not arctic, conditions.

"Nobody has seen the South Pole," said Smith. "Therefore nobody knows where it is. It is just as likely to be near the Amazon as anywhere else. It is to that great river, then, that I am going."

"All right," said his friends, "then there will be one more nut in Brazil."

Smith was so overcome by this slur that he decided not to go, and so the story ends before the adventures were reached.
